This weather is made up of surprises both atmospherically and politically and we wouldn't be surprised if Irl Hicks missed it entirely next month and Delemater would get there with both feet to the tune of 75,000 majority next November. Wouldn't surprise us a bit.

Senator Ingalls is reported as facile with his pencil in sketching as with his pen in writing. If he wants to get even with the caricaturists who are constantly exercising their skill on his lank figure, the columns of The Press and its corps of engravers are at his service.

In England with five times the mines and five times the number of employes there are only triple the number of accidents we have in the United States. We are told that in thirty years English coal mining has been doubled in safety. In twenty years we have barely reduced its perils one third.

Senator Evans would do well to turn back to his Cooper Union speech of 1875 and study it carefully to enable him to take a safe latitude on the Force election bill of 1890.—Philadelphia Times. Without a doubt there are people living to day who, when reading his speech, would laugh just as heartily as did the innocents of 1875.

The rush of sweltering humanity to the sea shore is explainable for the reason that the weather is exceptionally hot, or the sea side more attractive, or there is less to do, or money is plentier, or it does not cost so much to go, or the mode of travel is better, or there are a great many sick people, or some person has a good many friends, or a great many have gone just because a great many others were going, or else it is because they all wanted to go just this once.

If the census enumerators had been told that a bill strongly backed would be introduced during the present session of Congress providing for the pay to them of $3 per day when they fell short of receiving that amount there would have been a temptation for them to shirk their work and complaints of under-enumeration would likely be more common than they are. The enumerators deserve at least three dollars a day for their tiresome work and the heads of the census-taking are employing a judicious way to provide that recompense.

DOES FARMING PAY?

In a recent issue of Bradstreet's Report, Edward Atkinson has a paper in which he maintained with facts and figures that, measured by the cost of production, now and in years gone by, and by the present as well as the past purchasing power of what the farmer produces from the soil, that farming is just as profitable as it ever was. Mr. Atkinson laid particular stress upon the important factor which labor saving machinery has become in farming as in everything else, cheapening production and lightening the load of the farmer. The Fort Dodge Messenger takes up another phase of the subject, and shows by comparative figures that the farmer can purchase quite as much for what he gets for his crop as when he received a dollar or more for wheat, fifty cents for corn and good round prices for cattle and hogs. The first figures give cost of farm machinery in 1890 and 1880.

The declension in the price of nearly all machinery since 1880 is from 30 to 60 per cent., and during this interval the improvement in the manufacture of all implements has been so great that the reduced prices of to-day buy far more serviceable and effective machinery than the high prices ten years ago. The price of barb wire, the item next in importance on a prairie farm, has declined from 10 cents to 4 cents a pound. Iron nails were then $6 per keg, and steel nails can now be bought for $2.80. Plow steel has fallen from 13½ cents to 8½ cents per pound, and a cook-stove costing $33 then is now worth $24. Milk pans have fallen from $2.25 to $1 per dozen, and proportionate reductions, ranging as low as 70 per cent., have extended to all articles of household hardware, Groceries have also declined in a corresponding ratio: Sugar, from 12½ to 7 cents, granulated; kerosene, from 25 to 13 cents a gallon; flour, from $4.50 to $2.50 per cwt.; salt, from $2.25 to $1.25 per barrel; tea 30 per cent lower; crockery is about 25 per cent lower than in 1880,

Though dry goods were already quite low in 1880, there has been a continuous decrease in them. Calico is reduced from 6 to 5 cents; unbleached muslin from 8 to 6; gingham from 12½ to 10 cents; and worsted dress goods about 25 per cent all around. Ready made clothing is down from 30 to 50 per cent, and boots and shoes have fallen 33½ per cent. Lumber, drugs, furniture and all remaining incidentals that the farmer must purchase have undergone the same reductions. Absolutely no exceptions are made to this rule. Everything is very much lower than in 1880. Railroad charges have proportionately lessened. The reduction is most marked in everything that is made by machinery. This is notably true of furniture, clocks, watches, sewing-machines, organs, pianos, &c. The Messenger supplements its statements with figures taken from its own market reports for April, 1880. These show that at that time wheat was worth but 70 to 90 in Fort Dodge, in April, 1880. Corn then was 18 to 20, as against 18 and 20 now; flax seed was then $1.25, now it is $1.25; hogs are now $3.65 to $3 80, as against $3 50 and $3.75; oats have fallen from 21 to 17; cattle from $5 and $4 to $2 and $3; eggs have risen from 7 cents to 8 and 9, and butter has fallen from 16 and 18 to 14 and 15 cents. It might be remarked in passing, however, that the greatest reduction has been in the price at which farm machinery is sold. This, too, in spite of the fact that the machinery men have been looked upon as the worst enemy of the farmer. Next to his investment in land, machinery is the most expensive accessory of the farm industry. The very great reduction, therefore, which has been made in this department alone should be an important offset for the low prices which prevail. But it does not stop there. These figures are something new in the voluminous literature now extant on the subject of agricultural depression. The farmer has gained more by the reductions in his favor than he has lost from the decreased value of his products. Although the conditions by which the American farmer is surrounded are not so favorable as they might be, it is apparent that a good many extravagant estimates have been made upon his misfortunes. A few more critical analyses as these will doubtless fully convince the public that the agricultural industry is really in much better shape than has come to be believed.—Orange Judd Farmer.

THE METAL SCHEDULE.

The communication which the officers of the American Iron and Steel Association have addressed to the Senate Finance Committee, relative to the reductions in the metal schedule from the rates fixed in the McKinley bill, is a very plain but feeble statement of the facts as they appear to practical men thoroughly versed on the matters in controversy. Cheerful testimony is borne to the fact that the provisions of the metal schedule of the House bill have been preserved in the main by the Senate Committee, and are satisfactory to iron and steel men but the few changes which have been made are very important. And first, as to the duty on steel rails, it is shown that, by reason of the location of our nail-mills inland to suit supplies of ore and fuel, there would be great danger of losing the market in the South and southwest, where railway building is now the most active, in case the duty was reduced to $11 28 per ton. The facilities enjoyed by manufacturers in cheap water transportation would give them a virtual control of the market in the sections named.

Again, attention is directed to the fact that not a single railroad company in the United States has petitioned Congress to reduce the duty on steel rails. It is confidently believed, that every railway manager in the country would cheerfully testify that he desired no reduction in the present duty of $17 a ton, and that all are particularly opposed to the reduction proposed by the Senate committee. Figures are given to refute the charge that the cost of railroad building has been increased by the high tariff on rails, with a consequent increase in the cost of transporting agricultural and other products. And, finally, the reduction to $13.44 was assented to after careful examination, and not without considerable opposition on the part of some manufacturers; but it was agreed to, nevertheless, and it is now urged that the rate be accepted by the Finance Committee as the very lowest that can afford protection to the steel rail industry.

Other changes in the metal schedule are also discussed, and reasons are assigned why the rates as fixed by the Ways and Means Committee should be accepted. A serious depression in the iron and steel industries of Great Britain is already foreshadowed, and prices are likely to touch as low a plane as they have ever reached. In that event it would be but the part of wisdom to guard all our industries against the severe competition with which Europe always threatens us when its own industries are depressed or even in a condition of normal activity.

The bills for the admission of Wyoming and Idaho are specific in their declaration that the constitutions which the people of those Territories have framed for themselves are by these bills accepted, ratified and confirmed. The two Territories are therefore full-fledged "States of the United States of America," admitted into the Union "on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatsoever." They have good State material in them. Wyoming has an area as large as Massachusetts, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland combined, or as all of New England and Indiana united. A fair proportion of this immense area is good farming land naturally. A larger proportion can be made so by irrigation, and a large part of the remainder is well adapted to grazing. Its mineral wealth is very great, its coal deposits amounting to 30,000 square miles, twice those of Pennsylvania. Its people are above the average in wealth, and its percentage of illiteracy is the smallest of any political division in the country. Idaho has almost twice the area of Pennsylvania. It has large tracts of prairie land well adapted naturally for agriculture, and much larger tracts that can be made productive with irrigation, though a large part is waste and mountain land only fit for grazing or mining purposes. Coal is found in large quantities, like in Wyoming, while its deposits of silver and gold are among the most valuable in the country. By reason of a considerable Mormon element its population will hardly average favorably with that of Wyoming, though laws will greatly restrict the political influence of the Mormon element for harm.

The Republicans will win in the Congressional elections this autumn if the calculations of James J. Belden, the Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, are accurate. He thinks the record of the House will secure Republican victory. In support of this view he points to the fact that owing to the new rules introduced by the Republican majority the House could adjourn within a week and show a better output of good legislation than any other House for twenty years has had. The issue of the campaign, he says, will be the new mode of procedure in the House, the passage of the Disability Pension bill and the compromise Silver bill, the tariff bill and the Federal Elections bill, in all of which measures the Republicans have taken the position popular with the great mass of people.

Settled His Case.

Sheriff Cooke, of Centre county, came down from Bellefonte this morning to see our county officials about the releasing of Ben Fulton, a member of the Undine Hose Company, of Bellefonte, who celebrated a little too much on the Fourth and got in the county jail on the charge of taking some property from his hotel proprietor. The sheriff says that Ben never is guilty of anything like that before and his friends feel that he ought to be released. He couldn't stand the great crack and whack of our big display of fireworks without taking too much liquid refreshments, and it was an unintention error. The sheriff stated that the prosecutor was perfectly willing to settle the case and let Mr. Fulton go home to his family. The case was settled this afternoon.—Williamsport Sun and Banner.

The Political Bearing of the New States

The politicians of both parties are figuring upon the changes in the political situation caused by the admission of Idaho and Wyoming into the sisterhood of States, says the New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger. At the next Presidential election six new States will be represented in the Electoral College, casting a total vote of 19. The situation is figured out here to be like this: At the last election the Electoral vote was 401, of which 233 were cast for Harrison and 168 for Cleveland. The sure Republican vote was 182, and Harrison carried the two doubtful States of New York and Indiana with a combined vote of 51. At the next election it is safe to five of the six new States will be Republican, and one, Montana, may be classed as doubtful. The "sure Republican vote" will thus be increased to 198. But the total Electoral vote will probably be 420, making 211 necessary to a choice, so that the Republicans will be 13 short of victory. If they can carry Indiana they will have four majority in the Electoral College. Giving the Democrats all the States they carried in 1888 and New York and Montana, they will still lack four votes of victory. The conclusion is plain therefore, that New York and Indiana will be the pivotal States in 1892, as they were in 1888, with this difference, however, that the Republicans must carry one or the other in order to win, while the Democrats must carry both. The Republicans have thus been greatly strengthened, not only in the Senate but in the Electoral College by the admission of the new States. Democrats here, however, are confident not only of being able to carry New York, but also Indiana, and are by no means willing to admit that several of the old and new States classed as surely Republican are not within the possibilities of Democratic control.

The Republicans Active.

While the Democratic leaders are preparing to get their party machinery into good shape, the Republicans of Philadelphia are actively at work looking after the interests of their candidates. Chairman Porter and Collector Martin, who are the recognized local leaders of the Republican party of that city, have perfected the strongest kind of an organization and can be depended upon to do everything possible to assist in rolling up the usual Republican majority.

The headquarters of the local Republican organization will be opened up during the coming week, and an immense banner, with the names and portraits of the State candidates, will be flung to the breezes. Ward meetings will be held, and every effort made to arouse enthusiasm.

The Republican clubs throughout the city will be called upon to assist the city organization, and a division canvass to offset the one to be made by the Democrats will be made under the direction of the ward organizations. The polls will be well manned on election day, and if the Republican majority falls below the standard it will not be the fault of either Porter or Martin.

A Chance for a Good Shot.

It is stated that the operator at the Summit, on the T. & C. railroad, was scared nigh unto death, on the night of June 30. It seems a large panther, who has been feeding on the offal from the engineer's and other trainmen's buckets, was out for a lunch, and while the operator was making ready for his home he discovered this monster and stood horrified and amazed, thinking every moment he would be devoured and no one left to tell the tale. Jim, however regained his presence of mind, pulled his revolver from his hip pocket fired at the critter and it scampered off into brushes. This is no canard, the animal was seen shot at and—and still remains in the forest.—Osceola Leader.

A Hungarian Killed.

At the Nye bank on Tuesday evening about half past 9 o'clock, John Conrod, a native of Hungary, aged about 22, was killed outright by the fall of two loaded cars. The accident occurred through the false fastening of the hoisting rope, which, when near the foot of the incline broke, allowing the cars to fall back striking the Hungarian and killing him instantly. The man was unmarried. The funeral occured on Wednesday.

Our Story Teller.

THE EXILES.

A RUSSIAN STORY.

CHAPTER I.—THE INSULT IN THE MINE.

It is a terrible augmentation of punishment for exiles in Siberia to be sent to the mines of Nertchinsk.

On a cold October morning, several years ago, a small vehicle deposited a young Russian about twenty-five, in front of the wooden house of the inspector of one of these mines—that of Oukboul.

The condemned man, who was pale and weak, seemed worn out by the journey from Kieff to Nertchinsk, which had been made, without stopping, in an open kibitka. For more than two months, he had worn outside of his boots the iron rings of his chain riveted to his ankles.

The gendarme in a blue blouse and brass helmet, who had accompanied him, entered the inspector's office to deliver into his hands the papers concerning the exile confided to his care.

On the threshold he ran against and was almost overthrown by a hideous-looking man with a swollen face, who came out with his hands tied behind his back, and was with great difficulty managed by the gendarme in charge of him.

He was a convict who had attempted to escape from the shipyards of Okhotsk, and had been brought a long distance to be imprisoned in the mysterious fortress of Akatouia, situated on the outskirts of Nertchinsk. The very name of this fortress inspires unspeakable terror throughout all Siberia. The wretched being had effaced with sulphuric acid the word vor (thief) which had been branded upon his forehead and cheeks.

"I am thirsty!" cried he, in a choking voice. "Give me a drink, somebody! I am dying of fever!"

The gendarme paid no attention to his words, but fastened him to the heavy wheel of a cart under the shed belonging to the inspector's house.

From the interior of the mansion escaped the sharp sounds of a little violin upon which some one was gayly playing the "Belle Helene" quadrille. A lively voice was giving out the figures and movements to the dancers, whose resounding steps were accompanied with fresh and youthful laughter.

"A drop of water—something to drink!" yelled the convict, kneeling in the mud and rolling his wicked eyes, while his mouth foamed with rage.

The new comer turned away from this repulsive spectacle, and surveyed the spot where he was to undergo his punishment.

Before him were scattered a hundred cabins and yourtes, shelters of the toilers of the mine, above which rose here and there wooden edifices tenanted by the clerks, the captain, the priest, and the physician. He also saw the barracks of the guards, the chapel and the hospital. Everything had the most miserable aspect.

Beyond, bounding the perspective, were the Sabionoi Mountains, whose snowy summits stretched away to the east as far as the eye could reach.

In a ravine, a breach in the perpendicular walls rising to a height of more than two thousand feet, was the shaft of the mine.

Upon the blood red rock, the cold had already congealed the water produced by the melting of the snow, and the hydraulic wheel, which a liquid sheet set in motion in the summer, was still, rising huge and black like an instrument of punishment.

The icy wind from the ravine brought with it sharp needles of frost which pricked the exile's face.

He lifted towards heaven a look of sad resignation, but quick as lightning youth and right asserted themselves; his black eyes flashed and his body straightened with a movement of pride, which ennobled the convict's gray cloak and the hideous little hat which concealed the absence of the brown locks shorn off by the prison scissors. He scanned the horizon as if searching for some way of escape.

At this moment, the bound convict gave vent to a series of hollow howls. The music ceased. Two young girls thrust their flaxen heads curiously out of the half-open door, and their dancing master, gently putting them aside, emerged, holding his little pocket violin in his hand.

He was over forty. His bearing was decided and his air genial, but there was something of the grotesque in his appearance. He looked like neither a native nor a Slavonian.

He approached the convict and asked him in bad Russian, but in a tone of interest, what he was complaining about so bitterly.

"These dogs are allowing me to be consumed with thirst!" cried the wretch. "It is like red-hot iron in there!" added he, opening to its full extent a mouth, the lips of which were disfigured by the corrosive action of sulphuric acid.

The man of the violin had an inspiration. He drew a small empty flask from his fur-trimmed vest, and returned to his pupils to ask them to fill it with water. Then, he once more made his way to the convict and poured the contents of the flask, drop by drop, into his burning and swollen mouth.

The sufferer assumed the look of a grateful animal.

"Thank you!" said he.

"You allowed yourself to be recaptured, eh!" said the man of the violin. "Did you not know what awaited you!"

"Well, what!"

"Fifty blows with the knout and the rest."

"I will bear them and afterwards drink the health of the Czar, our general father."

The dancing master approached the new comer and said to him in a low voice:

"All talk! I wager that he will be dead at the twentieth blow."

The young man thought;

"This is what would happen to me, if I tried to escape and was retaken. Between this man and myself, by order of the Czar's judges, there is not the least difference."

Then, addressing the dancing master, he said to him, extending his hand:

"Let me thank you, in my turn, for your generosity to this unfortunate being!"

"I grasp your hand with pleasure," said the musician, who had noticed that the new comer bore on his back the square of red cloth indicating a political convict. "As to your thanks, they are superfluous. I am under no restraint, God be praised! I belong neither to the guards, the police, nor the management of the mines. I am a Parisian and a dancing master. Perhaps you are acquainted with Paris, Monsieur? Yes! Well, I was born on the Place de la Bastille, opposite the column. Vive la liberte! I don't conceal my sentiments!"

The gendarme, who had brought the exile, returned and informed the young man that the inspector was waiting for him.

"Shake again," said the dancing master. "Keep up your courage!" added he, in a whisper, grasping the young man's hand.

The latter departed, murmuring to himself;

"If he were a friend!"

The inspector, a small, clean-shaved man, with an angular profile and impenetrable eyes, ordered the exile to strip himself to the belt and, description in hand, verified his identity.

A medallion hung upon the young man's breast. He blushed and quickly covered it with his hand, as if to prevent anyone from touching or defiling it.

The action was ill-interpreted by the inspector.

"Allow me!" said he.

"Oh!" cried the exile, "I suppose that there is nothing dangerous to the safety of the state in the portrait of a young girl—especially that of a martyr—the daughter of the poet Davidoff, an exile like myself, whom she has followed into banishment."

"I knew Davidoff and his daughter," said the inspector. "He worked in this mine!"

"And since!" said the young man, eagerly. "In pity—"

"His lot has been ameliorated. He is at present living in Irkoutsk."

After these words the inspector entered the name of the convict on the register opposite the number 1307; then, he ordered him to be taken to the mine.

In a few instants, the exile was handed over to a corporal of the guards.

"Yermac," said the keeper, "here is a man to help fill up the void in your squad of miners."

"Three of my men died this week," observed the corporal, as he drew a note-book from his pocket and prepared to write. He looked at the young man.

"Yegor Semenoff," said the latter, thinking that the corporal was waiting for his name. "Shall I write it myself?" added he.

"Oh! I know how to write!" said the corporal, with a faint smile. "But I need only a cipher. Number!"

"Number 1307," answered the keeper. "The inspector directs that he shall lodge in the fifteenth yourte, where there are already two convicts."

While the keeper was speaking, Yegor Semenoff studied the countenance of the man, armed with a leather whip, under whose control he was placed. He found him possessed of a grave air and bronzed but regular features. He seemed to breathe honesty. There was nothing of the convict-guard in his face, which was rather that of a judge incapable of shrinking from his duty.

"To work!" cried Corporal Yermac, striking the air with his lash. "There!" added he, pointing to a spot where a number of miners were drawing from the earth a basket of ore. "I am behind you!" cried he.

The miners, covered with tattered sheepskins, filthy and barefooted, stared gloomily at the companion who had come to them warmly clad and wearing huge seadog leather boots bought at Nertchinsk, where the exile had been able, thanks to the money with which he was furnished, to make some useful purchases.

One of them, going before, showed him the road to take.

It was a ladder more than twelve hundred feet long. Yegor began to descend, followed by the squad and the corporal. Some smoky lamps, placed in cavities of the wall, served only to show the thickness of the gloom. Halting places prepared themselves to at rare intervals.

Yegor heard at the bottom of the shaft the metallic sound of the hammer blows upon the rock.

The sharp noise, the thick darkness, and the sad and ragged groups, which, when suddenly lighted up, threw out huge shadows, together with the air loaded with deleterious dust, made a strange impression upon the young man, who, nevertheless, was accustomed to the mournful episodes of the prison and exile.

Nearer, it was, if possible, still more frightful; the majority of these men, with great beards, long, shaggy locks, swarthy complexions, scaly skins and sinister looks, bore upon their foreheads and cheeks the infamous brand von. They were assassins, robbers, and forgers, and could be recognized by the squares of cloth sewed on the backs of their garments. A red square for the murderers, a black square for the robbers and a yellow square for the incendiaries.

The others, belonging to the category of political convicts, displayed wan visages and lean bodies undermined by fevers and gnawed by the dust of the ore, which sends forth arsenic if it is tin and verdigris if it is copper.

They might be called walking horses. Some were green, with bald pates as white as chalk. Their half-blind eyes let their lids droop as if for the sleep of death.

They arose and disappeared suddenly behind a rock, or plunged like ghosts into dark corridors; and one heard, from time to time, the hiss of a corporal's whip falling upon bony sides and howls caused by pain.

Yegor had been pushed to the extremity of a corridor just opened. Alone in this narrow hole, as in a stone vault, it seemed to him that he was buried alive. He was suffocating. A feeling of terror impossible to describe shook his body with convulsive shivers.

He strove to make use of his hammer, but his arm fell back inert and weak, as if paralyzed.

The keeper under whose charge he was advanced slowly towards him.

"Must I set you in motion?" cried he, raising his whip.

"If you touch me," screamed Yegor, whose brain was in a whirl, "I will kill you!" Then, as if a prey to madness, he added: "If you wish, wait—you can murder me with blows!"

And he gave the corporal a resounding slap on the cheek.

Yegor expected to be hurled to the ground, to be torn to pieces.

But the convict-guard, strange to relate, stared at him fixedly without a word; then, casting his whip far from him, as if to escape the temptation to use it he answered the exile's insult with these words, uttered in a tone of great calmness:

"I could crush you in my hands, if I wished to do so, but this time I pardon you! I accept the chastisement in expiation of my son's crimes!"

Fearing, doubtless, that he might say more, the singular keeper abruptly departed, leaving Yegor Semenoff to his unspeakable amazement.

CHAPTER II.—THE DAWN OF HOPE.

The little town of Nertchinsk had, a short time before, been greatly excited by the murder of an engineer called Major Dobson, the grantee of a piece of auriferous ground situated ten or twelve miles from the village.

This Englishman lived upon the land he operated. Thanks to modern improvements in the mining industry, he had succeeded in obtaining large quantities of gold in a spot disdained and abandoned by his predecessors.

The Major attracted the assassins more, perhaps, by the reputation of originality of character accorded to him for one hundred miles around, than by his wealth, although that was immense.

Every morning he went to the place where the steam-engine was working, wearing enormous boots drawn over three pairs of stockings. He examined the machinery attentively; at the least sign of rust, he pulled off one of his stockings and rubbed away until he had restored the polish; his three pairs of stockings were used in this way, and the mechanics, in whose faces he hurled them, were obliged to bring them back to him under penalty of dismissal.

Contrary to the custom of the majority of the grantees, he lived in niggardly fashion and had but one servant—an old woman—and it was asserted that, far from sending to Barnoul the entire amount of gold he mined—for the mines belong to the government, and all the gold of Siberia is smelted at Barnoul on the Obi—he did not fear to purloin large quantities of it which he kept concealed.

One morning, he and his servant were found dead, the skulls of both split open with hatchets.

However, the robbers did not succeed in discovering the Major's supposed hiding-place. They were able to steal only a small amount of silver, Major Dobson being in the habit of sending the most valuable portion of his profits to England.

Three weeks later, another assassination turned out much better for its authors, and agitated the entire district of Nertchinsk.

A Russian from the Crimea, named Khabaroff, possessed as grantee a piece of land from which he had been unable to get even the smallest morsel of gold, though much of the neighboring territory yielded superb returns. Then, this man devised the means of putting his hand upon some of the precious metal, the color of which the government would never see, thus depriving the grantees, his prosperous rivals, of commissions to which the results of their operations entitled them.

In his capacity of life proprietor, he had the right to keep a liquor shop upon his lands for the accommodation of his workmen, but, as he did not employ a single toiler, his spirits were sold to his neighbors' people at the reasonable price of a half pound of gold dust a bottle. Two barrels of brandy, worth at most fifty dollars, brought him in about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. It goes without saying that the purchases were paid for so magnificently with the precious ore stolen by the gold-hunters.

Khabaroff was despoiled of a portion of his ill-gotten wealth, after having been left for dead upon the public square. But, while he was being cared for, his method of enriching himself at the expense of the State was discovered, and misfortune overtook him.

In consequence of these outrages, the local authorities zealously set inquiries on foot. Then, it was suddenly discovered that a band of gold-robbers, already famous through odious exploits, had made this double stroke, and that the son of the Ipravsnik, or Justice of the Peace, had for a long time been associated with this band.

Everybody esteemed the Ipravsnik. He was a proud and honest Russian named Yermac, a descendant, perhaps, of the [illegible] who, followed by his gallant companions, conquered Siberia.

Yermac had been at Nertchinsk for a few years only, in disgrace—exiled, in fact. It was said that he had filled an important post in the magistracy in Moscow, acquiring there a reputation for austerity and incorruptibility, and pitilessly denouncing the prevarications of his colleagues. The latter, uniting, had succeeded in undoing him.

Such a man could not remain indifferent to the too well-founded suspicions in regard to his son. He resigned his office, and, as he was not permitted to return to Russia and did not desire to make further efforts to create an independent and honorable situation for himself, he solicited and obtained the position of superintendent among the guards of the Oukboul mine. Yermac was the keeper whom Yegor Semenof had insulted and struck. No doubt, if he had been acquainted with the rectitude of the man of the whip, Yegor would have repented of his fury, for he was capable of appreciating in others qualities he himself possessed in common with them.

Yegor Semenoff had been exiled for political causes. Arrested at Kieff, where he attended the university, he did not know what was his crime. One evening the police, making a descent upon his residence, had seized his letters, papers and books and led him to prison.

Two weeks later, he was hurled over the roads leading to Siberia. He had departed for "the land from which no one returns."

Being a noble, the law spared him the pain of traveling on foot, a slight amelioration of a punishment inflicted in an entirely arbitrary manner.

By dint of reflection and from few questions which he remembered had been asked him, Yegor felt satisfied that he owed the severities of the police to the friendship which existed between him and the aged poet, Abel Davidoff, who had been exiled to Siberia three years before.

Davidoff had been accompanied in his exile by his only daughter, Nadej, whose portrait, convict number 1307 worn upon his breast.

For him, alas! she was no longer of this world, and the little sentiment-romance begun between a student in his twentieth year and a young girl of sixteen had a sad epilogue!

Their destinies, however, seem to have this in common; that she and he, in all probability, would end their days far from Kieff.

Yegor, who, as soon as he had arrived at Oukboul had studied the country with the intention of escaping, suddenly renounced every enterprise of that kind on learning that Davidoff and his daughter resided at Irkoutsk.

Hence he strove to accustom himself to the terrible life of a miner, making superhuman efforts to succeed. Was not possible that he also might in time receive an amelioration of his lot. He was innocent—guilty only of sympathy for certain victims of the Czar's inexorable justice.

At Omsk, offended by the rough tone of one of the officials charged with fixing the place of his sojourn, he had answered him haughtily, almost arrogantly, his whose pride was wounded, he took a cruel joy, at the close of his insultation with his colleagues, in announcing to him—calling him "Monsieur" this time—that he was destined to work in the verdigris mines at Nertchinsk. Was it possible that this severe decision might be reconsidered! He felt that he must arm himself with courage!

His squad was working in an interior gallery already commenced in the vein. An excavation was being made. Two miners struck, turn by turn, upon the wedge which a third miner held. In the darkness, the flinty rocks emitted sparks beneath the repeated blows of the iron.

There was not sufficient air for respiration; vitiated and rarefied, it was also charged with deleterious dust and deadly poisons. When the rock was split, the work with the pick-axe began. It was then necessary to extend the gallery through soft stone which crumbled to pieces, incessantly threatening to bury the toilers beneath falling masses; and this labor continued uninterruptedly for ten hours daily.

Yegor fell from sheer exhaustion when he reached the mouth of the shaft, in the evening, after an ascension which lasted nearly two hours.

He struggled stoutly, but, nevertheless, discouragement finally took possession of him, fever brought on additional weakness and with it came the cortege of black ideas.

Soon he could no longer eat; his brain dried and burned, and there was a constant buzzing in his ears.

In this condition, the poor young man was haunted by thoughts of suicide; he repulsed them, at first, as he would have repulsed the thought of a great crime, but they persistently returned. He grew to think that, since he was doomed to death, it mattered but little if he hastened the moment a few hours. Was he not free from all responsibility! They were killing him and he would go to meet death, that was all! He, at last, resolved to end the slow agony to which he was condemned.

The method was very easy—it was close at hand.

He had heard of desperate wretches who had caused themselves to be crushed beneath blocks of stone. He would follow their example.

For three days he had been loosening a rock; he toiled with redoubled ardor at his perilous task, decided to place himself beneath the enormous mass when it was about to fall.

To succeed, he must put forth efforts and exercise a firm will for two days longer. A year of his life fled at each blow of the pick-axe without shaking his fierce resolution—at least, he thought so; but this obstinate work carried on with such a design wore him out.

One morning, he said to the two men who shared his yourte:

"I cannot rise!"

One of these men was a Russian political convict, transferred from Minousink to Oukboul as an increase of punishment; the other a Tunguse brigand, an assassin and a robber. Both of them, like Yegor, were new comers, and the government had lodged them in one of its yourtes until they could get time to build a hut. To enable them to live, they had a few cents, the salary from the grantee of the mine, receiving besides from the government sixty-six pounds of rye flour and one dollar per month. They could dispose according to their liking of one week in four.

Seeing Yegor so sick his companions carried him to the hospital. It was rather a charnal-house. When he recovered his senses, about forty-eight hours afterwards, he found himself in a wooden barrack arranged like the between-decks of a ship. Each cabin contained a number of invalids stretched upon shelves, one above another, [illegible] complete darkness, those who were least ill assisted those who were dying. The air was loaded with putrid emanations. With the death-rattles were mingled the hollow complaints of those struggling with suffering. It was horrible. This place of solace bore a closer resemblance to a hall of torture.

When Yegor had accustomed his eyes to the absence of light, he perceived on one of the shelves opposite to him two nude corpses in a state of decomposition. He was seized with terror and, gliding down from his funereal couch, dragged himself into the open air, suddenly recovering strength to pursue to the end of the earth the work of suicide. But fate was against him. No one had continued his task.

His last day had come. He was about to go from his yourte to the shaft, when M. Nadieiff, the grantee of the mines, who had arrived at Oukboul the day before, sent for him.

The latter had found himself by chance at Omsk, when the exile passed through that town, and had noticed him when his place of residence was being decided upon. He knew from the notes on his passport that he was acquainted with several languages, French, English, and German, and that he possessed notions of physical and mathematical sciences. Hence it seemed to the grantee, who was a cold and positive man, that he could turn Yegor's acquirements to a better account than by putting a hammer or a wedge in his hand at the bottom of a mine.

M. Nadeieff was a vigorous and thick-set little man, with a broad Kalmuck face, sharp and piercing black eyes, a flat nose, thick lips, which allowed white and solid carnivorous teeth to be seen, and a black beard as curly and woolly as the sheep-skin cap he wore.

"It is my principle," said he to Yegor, "to draw from the people I pay the largest possible profit. A man like you with a hammer in his hand can only be a bad workman. You should know better how to manage a pen."

"I studied at the University of Kieff," said Yegor.

"Yes, yes, I know. And I know also that you would, perhaps, have become a distinguished engineer, if you had not taken it into your head to meddle with things that did not concern you."

"But, nevertheless—"

"Enough! I am not a judge. I can do only this for you: Give you easier work, more in accordance with your tastes and aptitude, and, at the same time, more advantageous for me. I wish to write a memoir for the Czar, a memoir in which I shall do my best to establish that if Siberia, despite the riches of its soil and of its mines, is a seat of desolation and want, it is because there is a radical error in the system. I have need of an able secretary to develop my ideas, and you are my man. The captain is notified of your departure. To-morrow, one of my coachmen will take you to Irkoutsk, where you will lodge in one of my houses."

Irkoutsk! Oh! how agreeably that name sounded in Yegor's ears! Was it not at Irkoutsk that the inspector of the mines of Nertchinsk had told him Davidoff and his daughter resided? What if he should recover his old friends! That would be too much good luck at one time and he dare not think of it. It was a veritable intervention of Providence. Irkoutsk! that was to say far from the mine, far from the whip-armed corporal, far from the murderous rock already trembling upon its base, and far from suicide. Irkoutsk! is a civilized world and the spot where, perhaps, lived the poet Davidoff and his daughter Nadege.

He now blessed his exile that he was about to share, perhaps, with the adopted sister whom he loved so nobly. His heart leaped, but he was afraid to show his joy. M. Nadeieff might ill-interpret his sentiments and change his mind.

Yegor answered simply:

"I am at your orders, Monsieur. All I can do to satisfy you shall be done."

"Very well. I like people to talk to me in that way. To-morrow, at eight o'clock, my coachman will come for you with a troika. I shall not be at Irkoutsk for four or five days. You will have time to install yourself and rest."

WASH YOUR FACE BUT—

How Women May Preserve a Delicate Complexion.

It is not necessary for the world to know it, but it is a fact nevertheless, that most women are but slightly addicted to habitual face washing, says the World. These delicate skinned ladies find that the wash rag does not agree with their complexion, and so they refrain from using it. There is reason for this aversion, however. In the case of thoroughbred horses water is used with great economy.

Maud S. Queen of the turf, has her mouth washed out and her feet and ankles bathed in warm water twice a day, but not a drop of nature's nectar is allowed to touch her beautiful forehead, neck and shoulders.

The anti face washers are death on massage. They take hot drinks, start a copious prespiration which, by a process of flushing, cleanses the skin and stimulates the action of the oil gland. Then they use soft rags, rub the face with the grain of the skin, and in that way get a face washing worthy of the name.

Nine months of the year the skin wants feeding. If glycerine, in dilution, is not irritating, there is nothing better for a face bath, a lotion, or a beautifier. It is food and clothing to a poor complexion.

Cold cream is good, too, but the trouble is to get a wholesome quality. Much of the grease sold under that name is rancid stuff that makes the skin worse than before using it. Everybody uses powder nowadays, and some sort of oily substance should be used to remove it.

For the once a week face wash there is nothing better than benzion. Half fill a tumbler or tooth cup with cool water, into which drop half a teaspoonful of tincture of benzion.

With this mild wash your face, and it will astonish you to find the extent of the mask you have been wearing. It is just as well not to let this whitewash, or any other preparation, get into the eyes, and it is also advisable not to use the benzion oftener than once a week.

A few drops in the water used for the toilet will have the same cleansing effect as borax or ammonia, and it will also impart a clean, refreshing odor to the skin, but used in excess, all these accessories tend to debilitate the health of the skin. When the face is washed in a glass of virgin's milk, it is just as well to make the ablution before retiring.

Every woman has her own idea about soap. All are more or less partial to the expensive and highly perfumed cakes. This error is to be deplored, for, excepting the white lead and arsenic-weighted cosmetics, warranted to transform the ugly wrinkles of a witch into the dimpled beauty of a Venus, there is nothing on the toilet table so destructive as perfumed soap.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Sing a song of picnics, a basketful of pie; four and twenty million ants and bugs upon it lie.

"Do you think your father likes me?" he inquired. "Oh, yes," she answered. "He said he was going to wait up to night to see you."

Colonel Yerger—"Well, how did you like the picnic?" Gilheoly—"I was so glad to get home again that I was glad I went."

Blaine's Wonderful Memory.

"There is one thing I can say about Mr. Blaine," remarked Governor Gear, of Iowa, to a Washington correspondent. "He has the most phenomenal memory I have ever known. A few days ago I was calling on the secretary when he asked me to sit down. 'Gear,' said he, 'you are the very man I want to see. For a long time I have been wanting to ask you about some families which left my old county in Pennsylvania thirty years ago and settled in the part of Iowa which you now represent in congress. How are the Smiths as getting along And the Browns? And Mr. Blaine went on," added Mr. Gear, "to make inquiries about no fewer than twenty-five families, a member of which he had not seen for more than a quarter of a century. He not only remembered the names, but characteristics and family histories, and when my own memory was at fault, though I have known nearly every family he made inquiry about, he described the heads to me with such particularity that I could not fail to recall them had I ever known them. A very remarkable thing was that he could remember the names of nearly all the girls whom these men had married and also the names of their children.'

A Delightful Affair.

A very delightful party was given by Judge A. O. Furst on Wednesday in honor of Miss Edith Furst and her friend, Miss Pillsbury. A large number of people from Lock Haven came up on the 10.20 train. Among them were Miss Furst, Miss Van Gaasbeek, of Albany N. Y., Miss Busiel, of Lacona, N. H. Miss Pillsbury, of Lawrence, Mass., Miss Scott, of Kittaning; Miss Sandford, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Misses Kistler, Reichard, Meleick & Adams, & Mrs. F. Messrs Furst, Stebbins, Fredericks and Simpson, of Lock Haven. About twenty five Bellefonters met the above at the station, when the entire party entered a special car for Snow Shoe. A very pleasant ride up the switch back railroad, through the wild and picturesque scenery of the Allegheneies, brought them to the well known Mountain House. Dancing and music filled in the time till the dinner was served, when they sat down to an excellent repast. Afterwards they visited the deer park and saw Mr. Uzzle's fine herd of deer. It was then time to return, and the ride down was even more enjoyed than the trip up. At seven o'clock they reached Bellefonte, after an exceedingly pleasant day among the mountains.

How to Write a Letter.

Write the date distinctly, the day of the month and the year—not just the day of the week.

Write on plain, unlined paper.

Write your "q's" and "y's" differently, their tails turned in opposite directions.

Write your "i's" with a cross and your "i's" with a dot.

Write an answer to your friend's questions; if she had not wanted to know she would not have asked you.

Write with black ink—pale or faded ink has broken off more friendships and love affairs than one would imagine.

Write your name distinctly. If you are a married woman sign it, for example "Virginia Andrews," exactly as if you were not married; but if it is a business letter, the Mrs. should be put in parenthesis before your name; or better still, the letter may be written in third person. This same rule applies to an unmarried woman.

Write a short, crisp letter; a concentration of brightness. It will be much more appreciated than one longer drawn out.

Write as little as possible on the subject of love. Words of love are much better said than written.

Write yourself down a bright, sensisible girl, and you will then have written the very best letter that a girl can possibly write.—Ladies Home Journal.

BONNER.

All persons interested in improving the blood of their horses should all at the stables of Isaac Haupt and see the trottingbred horse Bonner His proprietors intend to have him kept for service. The pedigree of this horse as authentically traced is as follows:

The sire of Bonner was by Knickerbocker, whose sire was Rysdeckes Hambletonian, and the dam of Bonner's sire was by a Messenger horse. The dam of Bonner was a Vermont Morgan whose dam was a Starr mare.

These horses are all world renowned as every intelligent horseman knows. The dam of Bonner trotted in 2.40 at the age of 22 years, and at the age of 26 years She was not allowed trot for the sweep stack premium.

This horse has always been kept for service. And without being trained he trotted in 2.58 and competent judges declare that if properly handled he would now be trotting in the teens.

Bonner is a mahogony bay, will be 9 years old in May, and weighs 1000 lbs. He has bred colts that weigh 1400 lbs. and he has lighter offspring that are very promising for roading and for speed. f-20-3m

Bonner will be at the Mountain House stables in care of George Young, Snow Shoe, the last week in June. Then at Philipsburg at the Eagle Hotel stables ending the first week in July. Second week in Bellefonte at the stables of Isaac Haupt. Then at Weaver's, Farmers Mills and Wm. McFarlands, Boalsburg. Returning by way of Lemont and Buffalo Run to Bellefonte, where the agent, Isaac Haupt, will answer all inquiries as to terms, etc.

New Pension Law.

The act of June, 1890, granting pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the late War of the Rebellion, and to the widows, minor children and dependent parents of such, provides for pensions, from $6 to $12 per month, proportioned to the degree of inability to perform manual labor, to commence from the date of filing the application to all honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, who served for a period of not less than ninety days, and who are disabled to any extent for the performance of manual labor by reason of disease or injury of any character, not the result of vicious habits, no matter whether such disease was contracted or injury of any incurred in the service, or at any time since their discharge therefrom: It also provides for pensions to widows of such soldiers or sailors at the rate of $8 per month, and an additional $2 per month for each child under the age of sixteen years, commencing from the date of their application after the passage of the Act, without regard to the cause of the soldier's death. In other words, it will no be necessary to show that the cause of death was due to said soldier's or sailor's service, provided such widows are dependent upon their own labor for support. In the event of the remarriage of the widow such pension as she would have received will be paid to the minor child or children until they have attained the age of sixteen years, and in the event that such child is idiotic, insane or otherwise helpless, their pension will be continued to them during their life, or during the time of their helplessness.

The mother or father of a deceased soldier, is entitled to a pension of $12 per month, upon proof that the soldier's death was due to his service; that he left no widow or minor children surviving and that such parent is now in dependent circumstances without regard to their previous financial conditions in life.

Invalid pensioners who are on the rolls at a rate less than $6, whose disabilities are not of a specific character, are entitled to an increase to at least $6 per month, if not more; but proper application must be made therefor. And all pensioners who are suffering from disabilities for which not pensioned, whether due to their service or not, will be entitled to an increase of their rates under the new law. For further particulars inquire of J. Miles Kephart, 1st door to the right, Court House.

Pay of County Commissioners.

The pay of County Commissioners at present is $3,00 per day. Commissioners elected this fall will receive $3.50 per day, and will be required to make affidavits as to the number of days service. The statement going the rounds that the new Commissioners would receive $4 50 per day is incorrect. The pay was fixed by Act of Assembly and no one county had any part in the increase.

What Betrayed Him.

From the Washington Star.

They were trying hard not to look like a bride and groom, but an incident happened that gave them clean away. They stepped out of the Ebbitt House yesterday afternoon for a walk. The young man looked at the threatening sky and then, with the solicitude peculiar to young husbands, concluded that he had better raise his umbrella, and then his beloved would be protected when the rain did come. So he unfastened the band of his natty umbrella, gave it a little flirt and then raised it. About a pint of rice showered down on his head and scattered over the pavement. The spectators roared, the bride gigled nervously, and the young man beat a hasty retreat into the hotel to get the rice out of his hair.

Glorious News For Soldier's.

Under the Act. of Congress, June 27, 1890. All soldiers can be pensioned at the rate of $6.00 to 12.00 per month who have contracted any disabilities or injuries, not due to vicious habits, and have a permanent disability. Widows of soldiers can receive $8 per month when they are dependent upon their own support.

All soldiers, widows, minor children and dependent father's and mother's who will apply to J. Miles Kephart at the Registers & Recorders office in Bellefonte, Pa., can have their declarations filled up, before the clerk of Court, and all information will be given them, and all aid in procuring their pensions 1st. door on the right in the Court House.

VICTIMS OF THE STORM.

One Hundred and Thirty Believed to Have Perished.

EIGHTY-FOUR RECOVERED.

Heartrending Scenes at Red Wing—The Streets Filled with Grief Stricken People—All Business Suspended. The Burying of the Dead.

RED WING, Minn., July 16.—The best obtainable facts and figures up to Tuesday morning place the number of deaths from the wreck of the Sea Wing at about one hundred and thirty. The number of bodies found up to this time is eighty-four. The scenes here attendant upon the terrible calamity were heart rending. The streets were filled with people—distressed and frantic parents, grief-stricken brothers and sisters and sorrowing relatives and friends.

Some were fairly crazed with grief, and unable in any way to control themselves. All business was suspended, flags hung at half mast and many places draped in mourning. But willing hands rendered all assistance possible and the dead were cared for. The majority of the drowned were young people and of the working class, but many were prominent citizens.

The funerals began late in the afternoon and were continued through the evening. The bells rang almost continuously. The council held a meeting and appointed committees to aid in every way possible today, when most of the funerals will take place. The business men were also asked to close their business houses, and flags will be strung at half mast on public buildings for three days. A public memorial service will probably be held on Sunday.

L. S. Bayrell, of Argyle, Minn., was on the ill fated steamer when she turned over. He tells the following story:

A Passenger's Story.

"There were just 215 people on the steamer when she left the First regiment camp on her return voyage. There was evidently a heavy storm brewing and the wind was blowing a gale, but every one seemed to feel entirely safe. When the boat was about in the middle of the lake the wind was dead ahead and blowing very heavily. The captain had evidently become uneasy and shouted to the pilot, 'Hold her to the Wisconsin shore.'

"The pilot remained at his post nobly, but the vessel in veering round caught the wind on her beam, and, after a momentary stagger, careened bottom upward. The scene was appalling. Words cannot adequately depict the struggles of the multitude thus precipitated into the foaming water. The hatches had not been fastened down, as was reported, and the people in the cabin rushed on deck. Many of them jumped from the deck to the barge, and others swam ashore. After the boat turned over the tow ropes were cut and the two vessels drifted apart.

Shrieks of Despair.

"From the water scores of women and children sent up a last shriek of despair as the water closed over them. The greater part were carried under by the suction as the steamer turned bottom upward, and were unable to swim out. The water about the boat was soon dotted by the heads of the stronger swimmers, and in a few moments some twenty-five were safely lodged upon the overturned boat.

"Those first gaining the temporary place of safety assisted others in climbing upon the slippery surface, and in ten minutes all the human beings in sight were upon the boat. Just as the storm was subsiding and hope was strong within them the boat gave another lurch and more lives were lost.

"When the boat began to careen so fearfully I leaped from the steamer to the barge, and when the ropes were cut we drifted away from her some distance, and I was able to see about almost everything that was going on. The heavens were black with clouds and the waves were lashed into mountains by the strong wind. Here and there could be seen, as a flash of lightning revealed them, the white dress of some poor woman or child.

"One poor creature I saw go down clinging to her child, whom she had been trying to save. The mother had fastened a life preserver about her waist, and with its aid was trying to keep herself and child afloat until help could reach them. Suddenly I saw the woman release the hold she had upon the child and sink. She did not rise again, and the child soon followed its mother."

The Captain Censured.

Capt. Weathern, proprietor and commander of the Sea Wing, has been severely blamed by the citizens and others for what they allege to have been criminal negligence on his part in pulling out into the lake with such a crowd when the sky looked so threatening. The captain's wife and two of his three children lost their lives, and that fact, with the loss of his vessel and the great loss of life, have so broken him that he has kept out of sight. Two explanations of his action have been given, and both are understood to have come from him.

The first is that he did not consider the danger very great, and that he thought he saw a break in the clouds promising the clearing away of the storm. The other excuse is that the manager of the excursion, whose profits would be cut down by any delay in the departure of the boat, was so urgent in his insistence upon immediate departure that the captain yielded, and took his boat out to her destruction.

Many incidents of the disaster are related. James Webb, of Red Wing, and his young lady companion had just jokingly finished fastening life preservers on each other when the storm struck the vessel, and their joke proved their salvation, for both were saved. Two babies were found among the dead on Monday night. One of them was clasped in its mother's arms, while the other was found in a pile of life preservers.

VIOLENT STORMS RAGING.

Houses and Churches Demolished and Much Damage at Many Points.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 16.—A terrific storm of wind and rain burst upon the city and in a few minutes damaged a number of buildings, besides leveling trees and fences. The storm came from the northwest without warning. The wind unroofed a portion of Mayer's opera house. Lightning struck the steeple of the German Methodist church and nearly demolished it. A number of houses were unroofed, but no one has yet been reported injured.

A report from Ellsworth, five miles north, states the Straw Board trusts' paper mill was partially unroofed and a portion of the walls blown down. The damage is not estimated. Lightning struck and set fire to several farm houses on the outskirts.

Houses Unroofed.

PLYMOUTH, Ind., July 16.—Considerable damage was done to growing crops here by the rain and wind storm, and corn in all parts of the country has suffered terribly from the severe wind. Heavy hail storms are reported from various sections of the northern part of the county. Several houses and buildings were unroofed in this city.

Houses Blown Down.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., July 16.—A terrible rain and wind storm prevailed in this part of the state. There was no damage further than the blowing down of a few houses and trees. Two yachts left St. Joseph for Chicago just before the storm came up. It is not known how many persons were on board.

Blown Over by the Gale.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., July 16—The heaviest rain ever known here struck this vicinity, lasting half an hour. A high wind accompanied the rain and much damage was done. Two houses in the suburbs were blown over, the occupants receiving severe injuries.

A Church Badly Damaged.

TWO RIVERS, Wis., July 16.—During a terrific thunder storm which passed over the city, the steeple of the German Evangelical church was struck and completely ruined. Pieces therefrom were blown several hundred feet. The church building was also damaged.

THE FIELD OF LABOR.

The Hill Farm Disaster—Abram S. Hewitt's Men on Strike.

TRENTON, N. J., July 16.—Between 1,800 and 2,000 iron workers Tuesday morning refused to go to work in the New Jersey steel and iron mills, which are owned by ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt, of New York city, because of the refusal of the firm to sign the Amalgamated Iron Workers' association scale of wages and recognize that labor organization.

A week ago last Friday the heaters in the twelve inch room struck against certain rules, and asked Superintendent Stokes to sign the Amalgamated scale of wages. The superintendent said he had no power to sign, but he took the scale and promised to present it to the proper authorities. The men went back to work on the superintendent's promise that the matter would be all right in a few days.

Days passed and the shop committee again called on the superintendent, but got no satisfaction. Yesterday morning, before they would go to work, they asked whether or not the scale had been signed, and were told that it had not been.

Then they refused to work, and the men in the twelve inch room, the rolling mill, the bar mill and the puddling mill and their many laborers and helpers left the works. The leaders of the Knights of Labor and the Amalgamated association met in Hartman's hall and resolved not to return to work until the scale is signed.

Mr. Hewitt is in ill health and traveling in Europe, and there is no one here who can authoritatively sign the scale asked by the men. Edward Cooper, of the firm, left Monday for Europe, it is reported, to confer with Mr. Hewitt.

The Knights and the Amalgamated Association have secretly organized the works, which have been non-union for years. The firm is stacked with orders, and have been running day and night. They say they will not sign the scale.

Will Sue for Damages.

COLUMBUS, O., July 16.—The national executive committee of the Mine Workers' Union of America, in session here today, decided to bring suits in behalf of the families of the men who lost their lives in the mine at Dunbar against the company for $10,000 each case. They are now considering the Illinois strike question in executive session. It is practically certain a strike will be ordered.

To Convey Ericsson's Remains.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Secretary Tracy Tuesday morning formally revoked the orders of the United States steamer Essex, which was to have conveyed the remains of the late Inventor Ericsson to Sweden. While much pressure was brought to bear upon him to send one of the new cruisers on this mission the secretary did not decide to revoke the orders of the Essex until Monday night, and much surprise was expressed at the department Tuesday morning when the order was issued. The new cruisers Baltimore and Philadelphia are now under consideration for this mission, and although no assignment will be made for several days it is believed that the Baltimore will be selected. It would take at least two weeks to properly equip the Philadelphia for a sea voyage.

Hotel Men in Session.

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 16.—The New York State Hotel Men's association began its annual meeting here Tuesday morning. About 100 members were in attendance. After hearing the annual address of President Garrison and reports of the various committees the following named were re-elected officers for the ensuing year: President, W. D. Garrison, New York; vice president, W. G. Leland, Binghamton; treasurer, H. J. Rockwell, Warren county; secretary, W. A. Rosekraus, Albany. The association will make an excursion to Hotel Champlain, at Bluff Point, Wednesday, on invitation of J. W. Burdick, general passenger agent of the D. and H., and Manager Seavey, of the Champlain. Saratoga was selected as the place of meeting next year.

A Thousand Homes Burned.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 16.—The fire which has raged in the Stamboul quarter of this city destroyed 1,000 houses and burned a vast amount of timber, whose owners, comprising 125 timber merchants, are ruined. It is feared that there has been heavy loss of life, but nothing definite can yet be ascertained.

WRECKED ON THE RAILS

Disastrous Effect of a Gatekeeper's Flagrant Stupidity.

MANY FATAL COLLISIONS.

A Woman's Head Crushed Into a Jelly and a Man's Skull Fractured—An Engineer, a Fireman and a Tramp Instantly Hurled to Death.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Through the flagrant stupidity of a gatekeeper three persons were fatally injured at the intersection of North Paulina street and the Northwestern tracks. The following are the victims:

Hugo Blinsdee, 50 years old, skull fractured, terribly mangled about the head and body and injured internally.

Max Blinsdee, 12 years old, son of Hugo, skull fractured and badly injured internally.

Hugo Blinsdee, another son, 6 years of age, left shoulder broken, badly bruised about body and skull fractured.

The three were taken to the County hospital, where the father and Max were pronounced beyond recovery. The younger son is in a critical condition, though there is a bare chance of his recovery. The three were in a delivery wagon, and while driving over the crossing were caught by an outgoing train.

Crushed to a Jelly.

CHILLICOTHE, O., July 16.—A local freight standing at the depot here on the Hannibal road was wrecked yesterday afternoon by a special stock train running at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

Mrs. Green B. Roberts, of Wheeling, was stepping into the cabosse at the moment of the collision, and was instantly killed, her skull being crushed to a jelly.

A. M. Foster was thrown from the train against the Washington street bridge, sustaining a fracture of the skull. He will die.

A brakeman, name unknown, received probably fatal injuries.

Both trains were badly wrecked. Conductor O'Brien and the engineer of the special were promptly arrested pending an investigation.

Engineer and Fireman Killed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 16.—A West Shore freight ran into a freight train on the W. N. Y. and P., at 2:15 o'clock Tuesday morning which was standing on a side track with the engine across the West Shore line.

Engineer Walter Harris, of Fort Erie, and Fireman Collopy, of Hinsdale, both of the West Shore, jumped when they saw the approaching danger.

The engineer was instantly killed and the fireman received injuries from which he died at the City hospital here at 9 o'clock. The engines were badly wrecked.

A Bad Wreck Reported.

MANSFIELD, O., July 16.—A bad wreck occurred on the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio road about 11:30 o'clock Tuesday, one mile east of Ashland. The Chicago and St. Louis limited vestibule train No. 5 ran into the rear of a freight.

Reports as to the extent of the accident are conflicting, but it is believed several were killed and a number badly injured. Officials of the road here can give no definite information.

Instantly Killed.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 16.—The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe express ran into an open switch at Dodge City yesterday morning and collided with a switch engine with fatal results. Fireman Otis was instantly killed, as was also a tramp. The engineer jumped from the engine and had an arm broken.

They Sheltered the Counterfeiters.

KANKAKEE, Ills., July 16.—J. H. Nottingham and his wife have been arrested, charged with complicity in the counterfeiting business in this city. Nottingham had an examination yesterday, and was bound over in $300 bonds, while Mrs. Nottingham was held in $800 bonds. It is thought that this has been the center of work for the gang, while most of the money has been passed in northern and central Indiana. It is not thought that Nottingham and his wife are the parties that did the work, but that they knew and sheltered the parties who did it.

Morton's Arrest.

NEW YORK, July 16.—President Edward [illegible], of the New York Export Lumber company, who was arrested, has not yet succeeded in getting bail. It appears that the Western National bank, on whose complaint the arrest was made, loaned Morton certain sums of money secured by forty-three carloads of lumber, said to be worth $12,000. It is claimed that the pledged lumber was shipped to foreign countries without the knowledge or consent of the bank. The bank sues for $12,000.

Suffering from Lack of Water.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 16.—This town is out of water, and a great suffering and annoyance exists. Many of the manufacturing establishments have been compelled to shut down, and threats of suits for damage against the city are circulating. Not a drop of water can be had for love or money, and ice is $1 per 100 pounds. The firm at Pittsburg which put up the engines has been telegraphed to send a competent machinist to examine and remedy the trouble.

A Murderer Confesses.

NEWTON, Kan., July 16.—Isaac Van Brunt, who was arrested July 1, charged with the murder of George I. Roer, of Richland township, has made a full confession of his crime. When his victim was dead he robbed the house and took a team out of the stable, but only succeeded in getting $4.50. Extra guards have been placed around the jail, as there is fear of lynching.

TO BOOM CLEVELAND.

The Conference of the Maryland Tariff Reform Clubs in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 16.—The conference of Maryland tariff reform clubs held three sessions Tuesday in the interest of tariff reform and incidentally to boom Cleveland for the Democratic nomination. This latter they do not admit, as the organization is composed of a number who do not favor Cleveland's nomination. They are in line with Cleveland, however, on the subject of tariff reform, because he is the recognized leader of the idea.

A great many very influential men gathered together in the morning to attend the business meeting. Alfred Pearce, of Chestertown, was made temporary president. After the credentials of the various organizations were found correct, a letter from ex-President Cleveland was read in which he said:

"I am sorry that I have made such plans and engagements that it is impossible for me to accept your invitation. In common with all who are interested in the movement I am exceedingly gratified with the evidences constantly presented of activity and organization in aid of tariff reform within your state, and I hope that the proposed convention will be full of encouragement to the friends of the cause."

The sentiments of the letter met with hearty approval.

John De Witt Warner, of New York, delivered an address upon "Methods of Tariff Reform Work and Organization" in the afternoon. A great public demonstration was held in the evening, at which a number of senators, congressmen and other prominent men delivered addresses.

AN ILL FATED YACHT CRUISE.

Three of the Party Drowned and the Fourth Rescued Unconscious.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 16.—On Saturday last the small yacht Marion, belonging to the Bay View Yacht club, of South Boston, left Boston in charge of Capt. Vernon Locke, with E. C. W. Kimball, F. Goldsmith and Benjamin Cobb, of Boston, for a two weeks' trip along the coast. About 9 o'clock Monday night the yacht struck a sunken ledge off Rye Beach.

The captain ordered all hands into the tender, a mere cockle shell, which capsized, throwing the men into the sea. The four men managed to get astride of the keel of the tender, where they remained two hours, the sea continually breaking over them. Kimball was finally washed off and drowned.

Capt. Locke and Cobb tried to work the boat toward shore, but to no avail, and as the captain was trying to climb on to the bottom again he was washed away. Goldsmith and Cobb floated for some distance, when a large wave washed them both off. Cobb succeeded in reaching the boat, but Goldsmith was not seen again.

Tuesday morning about 3 o'clock a fisherman picked up Cobb in an exhausted and unconscious condition and brought him here. Capt. Locke leaves a widow and several children in South Boston. The others were unmarried.

DEDHAM, Mass., July 16.—Edward Kimball, son and only child of Frank Kimball, of this town, was one of those drowned by the wreck of the yacht Marion off Rye Beach. Goldsmith belonged in Jamaica Plain, Mass., while the surviver Benjamin Cobb, is a son of the venerable register of deeds of Norfolk county, Jonathan D. Cobb.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The Managers Will Take Some Lessons from Philadelphia Experts.

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—At 10 o'clock Wednesday, in the Continental hotel, this city, a sub-committee of the permanent organization committee of the World's fair is to meet and advise with those Philadelphians prominent in the Centennial exposition as to the most feasible means of assuring the success of the World's fair in Chicago.

The sub-committee consists of Mr. J. A. McKenzie, of Oak Grove, Ky., the chairman of the committee on permanent organization; Mr. J. H. Breslin, of New York; A. T. Ewing, of Illinois; M. V. Harrison, of Minnesota; R. C. Kerens, of St. Louis, and P. A. B. Widener, of this city, with Mrs. Hocaday as secretary and official stenographer.

Some of the party have already arrived in the city, and the others are expected Wednesday or about the close of the week. The meetings are to go on from day to day until all the information bearing on the subject that can be had here is obtained. When asked about the rumor that they had come here for financial aid Mr. McKenzie replied:

"The rumor that we have come here to enlist Philadelphia capital in the fair is untrue. Our object in coming is purely and simply to get information that will be of value to the commission. We were instructed," he continued, "to cable for a full set of reports on the Paris exposition and to secure, if possible, the presence of the late director general. Whether he will come or not we have not yet learned, and so of course the time of his arrival would be conjectural only.

"We are particularly anxious to learn the details of Philadelphia's arrangements for her exposition, and this city is chosen as the place where those with whom we wish to consult can be most easily seen. With the gentlemen with whom we will consult Mr. Widener has undertaken to arrange. Mr. Thomas Cochran, who was at the head of your finance committee, is looked to for a great deal of assistance, and we hope to have him with us to-morrow."

A TERRIBLE CONFLAGRATION.

Fort La France in Ruins—Many Dead and Fearful Suffering.

PORTLAND, Me., July 16.—J. H. Hamlen & Son, of this city, have received a letter from their representative at St. Pierre, Martinique, one of the West Indies, dated June 27, which gives the particulars of a great disaster at Fort La France.

Fire began about 7:30 a. m. June 22, spread rapidly before a high wind, and by the following morning had ravaged along the seashore from the western side of the Savannah to the Riviere Cossor. More than 1,700 buildings were destroyed, and with the exception of a very small portion the antique city of Fort La France is in ruins.

Many people perished and twenty-five bodies have been recovered. Three-quarters of the thickly populated area of the city is destroyed and seven-eighths of the people, numbering from 6,000 to 7,000, are homeless. The demand made upon the charity of those who are spared has reduced them to almost the same state of destitution. Money must be had immediately or the distress at Fort La France will become absolute starvation.

Gaudaloupe has sent the steamer Alcyon, laden with food. The bank of Gepe has remitted 5,000 francs as the first installment of a relief fund from the sister isle. The letter makes an appeal for help to generous Americans.

AFFAIRS OF THE NATION

An Important Report from the Senate Finance Committee.

ON OUR NATIONAL BANKS.

Form of the Bill to Regulate Their Circulation—The Portrait of William Henry Harrison to Adorn the New $20 Silver Certificates.

WASHINGTON, July 16. — The senate finance committee Tuesday morning ordered a favorable report on the nominations of the five members of the general board of appraisers recently appointed by the president. The only discussion was over the names of Messrs. Sharp and Jewell, of New York, against whom there was some feeling on the part of the Democratic and Republican members of the committee respectively.

The committee ordered a favorable report on the bill to regulate national bank circulation in the following form:

Be it enacted, etc., That the compulsory requirement of deposits of United States by national banks is hereby limited in amount to one thousand dollars of bonds for each and every national bank.

Provided, That the voluntary withdrawal of bonds for the retirement of national bank notes shall not exceed the sum of $3,000,000 in any one month without the approval and consent of the secretary of the treasury.

And further provided, That this act shall not apply to the deposits of bonds which may be required by the secretary of the treasury to secure deposits of public moneys in the national banks.

Sec. 2. That upon any deposit already or hereafter made of any United States bonds bearing interest in the manner required by law, any national banking association making the same shall be entitled to receive from the comptroller of the currency circulating notes of different denominations in bank, registered and countersigned as provided by law, not exceeding in the whole amount the par value of the bonds deposited:

Provided, That at no time shall the total amount of such notes issued to any such association exceed the amount at such time actually paid up of its capital stock.

An Organized Gang of Thieves.

GREEN BAY, Wis., July 16.—For several months an organized gang of thieves has been robbing freights of their merchandise at Fort Harvard, Wis. Detectives have been put on the case, but it was not until yesterday that they were able to get any clew. In their search they had their attention directed toward a house in a tough portion of the town. They forced an entrance and found packages and boxes of the stolen goods which will amount to about $1,000. The gang has been put under arrest.

They Smuggled Whisky from Canada.

MUSKEGON, Mich., July 16.—The three masted schooner Elgin, of Chicago, has been seized by the government officials and the captain and steward arrested on a charge of smuggling whisky from Canada to this port and offering it for sale. A. Y. SMITH, Storekeeper.

A Foolish Female Faster.

Mackeyville has a woman who is making a record of herself as a faster which promises to equal that of Tanner, if her strength does not fail too soon. The lady is Mrs. Daniel Snyder, who, with her husband resides in the prosperous village of Mackeyville in Nittany Valley. Mrs. Snyder commenced her fast on Sunday, June 10th, consequently yesterday was her thirty-fourth day since food passed her lips, so far as it is known. During the thirty-four days Mrs. Snyder positively refused to eat food of any kind, and occasionly took a little water For the past five days not even water has passed her lips and she has become very much emaciated, being reduced to a mere skeleton. No cause is known for the woman's singular action in refusing to take food. She has no disease and is apparently of sound mind. He condition at present is simular to that of a person greatly reduced by fever or other wasting disease and she is unable to speak owing to her weakness. About two years ago a Philadelphia doctor performed an operation on Mrs. Snyder for the removal of an ovarian tumor, but physicians say her continued fast is no way a result of the operation. This is said to be the third time she has fasted for long periods of time, although in neither of the previous instances did her fast continue so long. Mrs. Snyder's death is likely to result in a few days as she is now thought by physicians to be in too low a condition to revive.—Lock Haven Express.

We have been requested to say that Ben Fulton, who was arrested on the 4th of July and held in Williamsport on a charge preferred by the hotel keeper where he stopped does not now, nor never did, belong to the Undine Hose company, and at the time of his arrest was not wearing a uniform of said company or in any other way connected therewith. In justice to the company we are glad to make the correction.

Demorest's Magazine.

We are all curious—and it is surprising how curious we are—to know the way other people live, especially well known people. For several months we have been treated to glimpses into "Some Homes Under the Administration," in Washington, in a fine series of beautifully illustrated articles in Demorest's Family Magazine. In the August number (just arrived), Postmaster Gen. Wanamaker's mansion is thrown open to us, and we are charmed with its beauties. The handsomely executed illustrations give us every detail as accurately as would a personal view and it is a great pleasure to stroll with the waiter and artist thaough the elegant apartments and the famous picture gallery, the latter containing some of the rarest works of art in America. This August number should be seen by everybody, if for this feature alone; but it contains other features equally interesting, not the least of which is an account of "The Oberammergau Passion-Play," which is illustrated not only with a picture of the Bavarian village where the play is now being enacted, but also many of the tableaux shown in this historical performance.

There is also a complete novelette by Queen Elizabeth of Romania ('Carmen-Sylva'), preceded by her portrrit and fine illustrations of her summer castle and her boudoir. The other articles and stories are all of the highest order, and beautifully illustrated, forming a midsummer Number of rare merit, which is enhanced by a sea-shore water-color frontispiece of artistic value. A Remarkable Case From Illinois.

'I suffered five years with mercurial Rheumatism, which was the result of potash and mercurial treatment by physicians, for constitutional Blood Poison. They not only failed to cure me but made me a physical wreck and my life a burden. I then commenced taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and after using a few bottles was entirely cured of the rheumatism, which the doctors brought on by their remedies, and the Blood poison which they failed to cure. I cheerfully commend S. S. S. to any one similarily afflicted."

Took a Drink of Ice Water and Fell Dead.

On Monday forenoon about half past eleven o'clock Howard McClellan, aged about eighteen and a son of Joseph McClellan, a farmer, living about two miles west of Tusseyville, was assisting to haul in grain on his father's farm. They had just finished unloading a load and the young man, who was very warm, as well as thirsty, crawled down off the mow and drank about a half pint of ice water. He stepped away from the bucket and stood only a few minutes when he fell over dead. His death was caused by drinking the ice water when in such a heated condition. The young man is highly spoken of by all who knew him and his sudden death casts a gloom over the entire community and is a terrible blow to his family. The funeral will occur on Thursday morning, interment to be made at Tusseyville.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. Food Adulteration.

The question of Food Adulteration is now occupying public attention more than ever before, and organizations are being formed in almost every state to prevent the sale of adulterated food or drink. The following letter voluntarily given, speaks volumes for the purity of Speer's Port Grape Wine:

MR. ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N J.

Dear Sir:—The result of my investigation of your Wines convinces me that they are perfectly pure and free from foreign or deleterous substances. The best I have ever tasted, and is all that can be desired in a first class Port Wine. The Unfermented is especially nourishing, and where the action of alcohol is not required it is well adapted for invalids. I speak as a physcian. Your Pedro Brandy fills a want long felt in the profession, for pure brandy can only be procured with great difficulty.

Pennsylvania Railroad to the Seashore—Second Select Excursion.

The second of the Pennsylvania Railroad's series of select excursions to the seaside resorts of New Jersey occurs on Thursday, July 24th. The points embraced in the tickets are Atlantic city, Cape May, Sea Isle City, or Ocean City, any one of which may be chosen. The Jersey coast was never more attractive than it is this season, and there was never so much to amuse and entertain nor is there any possible way in which all the pleasures of seashore life can be more thoroughly enjoyed than through the medium of these select parties.

A special train composed of day parlor cars and day coaches, will leave Pittsburg on the date mentioned, at 8.50 a. m. and run through to Philadelphia, arriving at 7.16 P.M. The night will be passed in Philadelphia and the party will take regular trains to the sea shore next morning.

Passengers from Pittsburg, East Liberty, Irwin, Uniontown, Connellsville Scottdale, Stonerville Greensburg, or Johnstown may take the evening trains leaving Pittsburg for Philadelphia at 4.30 and 8.10 p. m., and proceed to the shore the next morning.

The first of these excursions was a grand success and similar good fortune is predicted for the others.

The excursion rate from Bellefonte is $8.65 and the regular train connecting with the special will leave at 10.25 p. m.

Any special information in regard to these excursions may be obtained by addressing T. E. Watt, Passenger Agent, Western District, 110 Fifth Avenue Pittsburg.

A Light Crop.

Farmers who are in the city to-day stated that the wheat crop is not near as good as it was expected it would be a few weeks ago. The crop did not head well, and the grain is of poor quality as a general thing. One farmer said he believed the crop in Clinton county would not average eight bushels to the acre.—Lock Haven Express.

That's the way they are down in Clinton county, never satisfied. Now it is currently reported, on good authority, that the crops all over the country are better this year than they have been for a long time. But then it is also known that some men would complain if they were to be given the whole earth and a seat on the right of the Great White Throne, because they were not privileged to chuck their neighbors into Hades.

BICYCLE STORY.

"Now, then, you sir! What are you doing here?"

"Why, enjoying this very fine view, and in a very comfortable position too."

The first speaker was the burly Mr. Hicks, especially proud of his meadow on the top of Heysham hill, and especially indignant at the trespassers who persisted in infringing on his private property. The trespasser on this occasion was a young man, slim and wiry, with hair that seemed to have borrowed its fineness from his muscles.

'What right have you to be on here, I should like to know?' proceeded the farmer.

I don't know. What right have you?'

'Right? That's a good un. Why this field's mine.'

Indeed? I am sure I congratulate you on it.'

'Come, turn off.'

'Certainly; if it's yours. But I didn't think you'd mind my being on it.'

'Of course I mind. You're trespassing. What if a fellow came tramping all over your garden, and sifting on your grass and hacking up your gravel, and cutting up your cabbages? asked the farmer, waxing eloquent and even figurative.

'Give it up. Ask me another,' was the cool reply.

'Do you know I could prosecute you?'

'Really, now?'

'If you don't mind, then, I will, sure as my name's Hicks!'

'Good old Hick!' murmured the other,

If you give me any more of your impudence I'll have you up.'

'Up where?'

'I'll let you know a precious sight sooner than you like, if you don't take care.'

'Well, I'm off. Will wait for an investigation next time I come this way. Good bye.'

The young man passed on his way, and had soon entirely forgotten the little episode. But the worthy Hicks was left almost choking with exasperation. He hated these bandyings of words. He always got the worst of it, although in the right all along. He would leave no stone unturned in order to find a way of paying off this score against the offender. He would,

But first he must ascertain who the offender was. Accordingly he followed the young man home at such a distance as to arouse neither suspicion nor comment. He did not have to go far. After descending the hill and traversing a few hundred yards of the lane at its foot, he saw his enemy turn into the garden of one of a row of lately built houses.

'Umph! a new comer,' muttered Hicks, 'One of those city chaps. Just the sort I hate.

On his way back he fell in with a neighbor from whom he ascertained that the young fellow's name was Axel. And among other things he learned that his enemy was a bycyclist.

'Is he now?' said Hicks. How do you know? 'Ever see him riding?'

'Oh, yes; every morning he goes out before breafast, as regular as clockwork.'

'Every morning! Where to?'

'Oh, the same old run every morning; tears down Furnall hill, and runs home round by the flat road by the bottom.'

'Whatever for?' asked Hicks the practical.

'Humh! S'pose it's to get up an appetite for breakfast, but don't make him much the fatter—he! he!'

'Nos,' said Hicks, to whom the same remark would by no means apply; 'and what time's that when you see him?'

'Twenty to eight, that's when he starts. I know that, 'cause I meet him every morning.'

Mr. Hicks had now heard enough, and the two soon afterwards separated. Hicks slowly retreated home, meditating an idea which had struck him. He particularly loathed bicycles and bicyclists. There was something so irritating about that supercilious ease with which they ran past him and his cart horses.

'Why,' he would sometimes declare 'a man dursn't leave his cart across the road on a hill, but what one of them bicycle chaps comes flying down; and if he do get by without breaking his neck he must needs storm away, as if we weren't going to take up as much of a road as we precious well please.'

The next morning saw him on Furnall hill at twenty minutes to eight. Barely ten minutes had elapsed when the flash of the sun among the plated spokes of a fifty-two inch bicycle wheel caught his eye; and down the long, smooth hillside sped its rider, the hated young Axel. He had thrown up each leg over the handles, and was leaning back, his coat confined by one button alone, flying open to the rushing wind, and every line of his countenance and figure expressive of his half-intoxicated delight in the motion, perilous and yet secure from its very speed.

The machine flashed by the farmer and was [illegible] of the descent in a moment. [illegible] faction. Here was a way towards revenge! Any obstacle would be enough to throw into overwhelming confusion a bicycle traveling at that pace. There was a cross lane intersecting the main road about half way down the hill. From this lane he meant to bring a cart, as if by accident, across the road in the very path of the bicyclist, and see what happened.

'Yes, see what happens!' He repeated he thought, and quitely chuckled at the humorous idea.

Upon the next morning Farmer Hicks harnessed his heaviest cart horse to a substantial wagon, and proceeded towards the scene of this intended experiment. A strong wind was blowing down Furnall hill.

'So much the better, thought he; 'he'll come down all the faster.'

When within a few yards of the main road the farmer drew up, dismounted, and, through an opening in the hedge eagerly scanned the summit of the hill. Yest, here was the flash of the nickle! Axel had just thrown up his legs in his accustomed attitude. Hicks leap back into his cart, and drove it on quickly to the entry to the main road.

Then he slackened speed once more' meaning to cross the road more slowly He was a little too soon, however. He waited until the whirring sound of the approaching wheels fell on his ear, and then urged his horses forward again.

Axel was tearing down the hill, his swift course accelerated to more than his usual speed by the stiff breeze at his back, At the very height of a bicyclist's happiness he was suddenly thrown into the kneenest apprehension by the sight of a horse's head and shoulders slowly emerging from the lane on the right of the road in such a way as to threaten to block his path. The machine was traveling too fast for the shock of the brake; he must fly on and graze past in front of the horse's very nose.

No—too late! The horse and cart are now clean across the road; he must inevitably dash into the obstacle, to be precipitated over the handles, who should say whither! Ah, there is still a passage, a bare foot in breadth, into the cross lane on the other side! But what a curve to venture on at that place! But there was no time for hesitancy; he leaned hard over to the left and jammed the handles round. As the flash and whir of the wheels the startled horses reared up; the bicycle rushed by beneath tauplifted fore feet, escaping an upset at the curve as if by a miracle and then dashed down the rough lane, but still carrying its rider erect exultant and triumphant.

But the horse at the rush and flash of the wheels at such close quarters, wheeled round in terror, and, taking the bit in his teeth, broke away at a furious gallop down the hill. At the sharp corner at the foot the heavy cart was overturned, arresting the progress of the animal and hurling out its driver so violently as to leave him lying in the roadside ditch, helpless and unconscious, with rib and arm fractured.

The ponderous rumble of the runaway had been heard by young Axel. He quickly checked his course, dismounted, and, leaving his machine ran back to see how horse and cart had fared. At the bottom of Furnall hill he found the horse endeavoring to struggle to its feet from among the debris of the shattered vehicle, and the motionless body of the lusty Hicks lying in aheap in the ditch. He stretched the unconscious farmer in an easier position, and ran off for help.

Well, during the period of his recovery, Farmer Hicks gave up the idea of vengeance upon the head of his former foe. Did not young Axel visit him, help to nurse him, and even show some eagerness to pay the doctor's bill, affirming the whole thing to be entirely his own fault? The worthy Hicks was not one to deny the latter with any vigor, but he was sensible to the kindness shown towards him during his illness, and was glad to be reconciled. He has now lost all interest in experiments upon bicycles running down hill.

When beets, carrots or parsnips do not appear to grow, though given every opportunity by manure and cultivation, the slow growth may be due to the plants being close in the rows. Thinning out the plants just after a rain will be of advantage.

There is never too much good butter on the market, but there is always a large supply of inferior butter. The prices are not regulated by the quantity so much as by the quality. Good butter sells at a high price at all seasons of the year.

The price of the cow does not indicate her value as a producer. Gilt-edged butter is something that depends on how it is made. The cow gives the milk, but upon the management of the milk, cream and butter depends the quality.

It does not pay to put the best fruit or vegetables on top and have the purchaser find something not so good when he reaches the bottom, as it makes him suspicious, the consequence being that the sale of good fruit is injured.

—The Hale stone building on the diamond is being remodled and fixed up for a jewelry store which will shortly be opened up there by a Mr. Achenbach, o Williamsport. There will be a full glass front put in on Allegheny street and the building otherwise modernized and improved. It will greatly enhance the appearance of that corner.

—It is bad enough at all times for an editor to visit a bar room; but if he is so disposed he should do so open and above board. But when an editor, who poses as one of the most righteous and holy in the town; a member of the church and a leader in the Y. M. C. A. is caught coming out of Kohlbecker' bar room, in Milesburg, it looks bad deed it does; and, in justice to his subscribers, an explanation is due and should be forthcoming.

—Since the departure of Miss Nellie Thomas some of Bellefonte's gallants are in a bad way. They evidently were badly smitten with Nellie's charms as was evidenced by the way a number of them were so anxious to be with her to the last minute and for that reason accompanied the party to Milesburg. Editor Kurtz thought he would have the last word when he got on the train declaring his intention of going that far but W. I. Swoope and John Bullock were not to be beaten in that way and they, too, went to Milesburg. We would suggest to Mr. Chambers that if he has any more handsome and accomplished relatives to have them visit him.

—There are five phases to the moon in July, with two full moons—one on the 2d, the other on the 31st. This is rather an unusual occurrence. The southern and western skies are ablaze with brilliant stars and shining planets, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn are all conspicuous objects in the heavens. Jupiter is approaching the sun, and is growing more beautiful every night. Mars is withdrawing, but is still magnificently red and glowing. There will be several important conjunctions during the month one with Jupiter the last day promising especial interest. Venus will continue to be an evening attraction for some time to come. Saturn will come in conjunction with one of the satellites on the 19th, and will look quite handsome through a telescope.

IT WONT BE BUILT THIS YEAR.

That Railroad to Huntingdon County —What They Think Over There and What They Say Over Here.

For some time past the residents of Stone Valley, Huntingdon county, have had an idea in their heads that there was going to be a railroad built from Bellefonte to that valley by the Collins' Brothers, of this place, for the purpose of bringing out the excellent (?) iron ore that they claim they have over there. The DAILY NEWS said then that the railroad would not be built if it depended on the parties at this end of the line as the ore was not of so good a quality to at present warrant that expense.

A resident of Manor Hill, who signs himself "Other Fellow," writes under date of July 5, to the Huntingdon Local News as follows with the request that we copy and republish it in justice to all parties. The letter is as follows:

"Is it not surprising that they did not make such a statement before they leased thousands of acres of land along the proposed line? Is it not surprising that they did not analyze the ore before they spend so much in prospecting and in surveying the line across old Tussey?

"Is it not surprising that a business firm would be so reckless in making statements of the vast amount of ore contained in this county, promise to build a railroad, etc., all before they discovered that the ore was too poor and would not pay? I am reminded of the story of the dog and the Quaker: "I will do thee no harm, but I will give thee a bad name; Mad dog, mad dog," was the cry. Were our friends bitten that they publish to the world by the press that (our ore) their ore is of a poor quality, too poor to go after. If the statement be true that the ore they have leased "is too poor to go after," we can furnish ore in abundance that has been analyzed by their neighbors. Here is a report of four samples taken from the surface outcrop: No 1 has no superior. Will take thousands of tons of it. No 2, good; could not be better No, 3, very good. No. 4, good. I could furnish 25 or 30 samples just now of same quality of the fossil ore. Also hemitite and pipe ore running from 45 to 60 per cent.

"In view of these facts we do not think it neighborly of our Centre county neighbors to publish to the world that our ore is poor, etc. Will they not do us ustice to copy and print from your columns again? My statement made to you was in the main correct, while not in my language, yet in substance. I never did think that the parties referred to would build the road, but I had reason to believe that there was a power behind the throne, and that the railroad would be built. I still believe that it will."

In addition to the above the Local News of July 9 published the following paragraph:

'A gentleman from Shaver's Creek was in town yesterday, and informed us that the extension of the Buffalo Run railroad to this county is not knocked out. The projectors of the railroad were in the valley on Thursday, examined the ore, and intimated that the road would be built. They are asking for 50,000 ties, have about 100 carts at Bellefonte, and informed a farmer that they would remove his orchard next Spring in order to get at the ore underneath. These are pretty large straws that point conspicuously toward a railroad."

We would just say to 'Other Fellow' that he is entirely off his base in regard to the verdict rendered by our neigbors as to the quality of their ore. The verdict in brief, was no good.

As to the gentleman from Shaver's Creek we politely but very emphatically tell him that when he told the above story he did not know what he was talking about. Superintendent Thomas A. Shoemaker was seen by a NEWS reporter and he said the movement had about fallen through and that we were at liberty to say that there would be no road built this year; and that they were not asking for 50,000 railroad ties and that they had not one cart at Bellefonte to put on the proposed railroad. In brief that the construction of a road to that locality at any time in the future was as indefinite and uncertain as anything could be. Now these are facts obtained from the parties in interest. It is not of our choosing that the railroad won't be built. We would like to be connected with our Huntingdon county brethren by a short route railroad, but the chances for that blissful connection are very slim and far off.

Now if our Huntingdon contemporary will publish the above it may help to relieve the awful suspense of "Other Fellow" and the resident of Shaver's Creek

Notice to Water Consumers.

For some time past it has been necessary to run the pump at the water works every hour in the day in order to keep water enough in the reservioir to supply the demand. This is caused partly by the extremely warm weather and a good bit by the careless and useless waste of water. Hydrants are left open when there is no call for it. Lawns sprinkled when not necessary; on Wednesday morning, just after the rain of the night previous, some parties had their hose on and sprinkled their lawns for an hour—and that when there was no call for it.

Now there is a fine of five dollars—as established by an ordinance—for useless waste of water and, if more caution is not taken and more care used it may be that some people will have to pay the fine. The water committee takes this means of notifying the consumers o Bellefonte to be more economical in the use of water and then a good supply can by kept up. Please bear this in mind.

The Clara Price Monument.

The committee authorized to receive bids for the erection of a monument ove the grave of Clara Price, the young lady who died while defending her honer at Karthaus, have awarded the contract to D. Batchelder, proprietor of the Lock Haven Granite and Marble Works, and the design for the monument has been agreed upon. When completed the monument will be erected over the grave of Clara Price, at Keewayden, and a day set apart for unveiling it to the gaze of the public. The committee to receive the bids was composed of W. B. Potter, Jas. A. Heckendorn and E. I Gilliland, and the design of Mr. Batchelder was selected from among those of nine competitors. The monument will be of the best quality dark Quincy granite, of spire form, and will be 14 feet 6 inches in height. There will be three bases, the bottom one 2 feet 6 inches square and 1 foot thick, the second base 2 feet 7 inches square and 1 foot thick. The die, or inscription block will be 2 feet high and 20 inches square, with plinth 17 inches square and 8 inches high. The spire, or shaft, will be 9 feet high and 1 foot and 1 inch square. On the inscription block will be the following inscription:

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
* CLARA IDA PRICE. *
* Born, June 16th,1871,Died Nov- *
* ember 27th, 1889. Aged 17 years, *
* 5 months and 11 days. Murdered *
* near Karthaus, Pa., November *
* 27th, 1889, by Alfred Andrews. *
* Virtue hath its reward in life as *
* after death. My life for my *
* honor. PRICE. *
* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

In the bottom base a hole will be cut 10 inches long, 5 inches wide and 4 inches deep in which will be placed a list of the names of subscribers to the monument fund, copies of the county papers, and such other articles as are usually placed in a corner stone. The cost of the monument will be between $300 and $400. and the fact that the contract has been awarded to Mr. Batchelder is a guarantee that the job will not only be creditable to himself, but to the committee as well.—Lock Haven Express

Three Items from Penns Valley.

On the evening of the 3rd while assisting in ushering in the 4th Bert Shimp was badly burned by a premature explosion of a small cannon he was assisting in the firing and was touching it off when it exploded in his face, burning him severely and filling his entire face with powder, his eyes narrowly escaping injury.

J. A. McClain and Bro., have purchased 500 acres of timber land on the mountain facing Centre Hall, from Gordons, and will at once put a steam saw mill at the north end of town, near the water works, and begin the manufacture of lumber. The Walker Bros., of Milesburg, will manage the operation and employ about 25 hands, with headquarters at Centre Hall. The mill will be entirely new, and is already in course of erection.

On Tuesday evening last, after a long and lingering illness of many weeks, the death of Mrs. Jennie, the wife of Mr. Oscar Stover, occurred at her home near Boalsburg. She was the daugnter of Mr. David Rhinesmith, of Bellefonte, she leaves a husband and three small children. The funeral took place on Friday last, interment being made in the Boalsburg cemetery, Rev. Black officiating. Her age was about 31 years. She is the second daughter of Mr. Rhinesmith's that died within three weeks—Reporter.

Colder Than Christmas.

The weather yesterday is said to have been colder than on last Christmas, according to the Williamsport morning paper. City Treasurer Housel stated that yesterday morning at 7 o'clock his thermometer registered 56 degrees, while on Christmas at 10 o'clock in the forenoon the same instrument registered 64 degrees. Queer weather, bnt another warm wave is reported on the way.—Lock Haven Democrat.

Why that's nothing. In Snow Shoe the same morning there was a severe frost and thin particles of ice could be found. The above was told us by a reputable person and we have no doubt it is true. And this on the 10th day of July.

Bellefonte's Leading Hotel.

A new 'buss has lately been added, which is a great accommodation to the many patrons. THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The Annual Encampment at Mt. Gretna will Soon Take Place.

Pennsylvania National Guard will encamp as a division this year and Mount Gretna, Lebanon county is the place at which the soldiers will go into encampment. There is probably no lovelier spot for the purpose in the state—a fine parade ground, plenty of good water, wooded lands in the shadow of which the tents can be placed, make these grounds delightful ones for the purposes to which they will be put. The encampment this year will be a memorable one from the fact that the regular troops will be encamped with the malitia. Several batteries of artillery, at least two troops af cavalry and an equal number of infantry will go on the tented field and will remain with the Guards until the week's outing is over. Lieutenant Bean, of the regular army, has also been detailed to make notes of the personnel and military efficiency of the state troops.

Colonel Theo. Burchfield has issued orders relative to the fifth regiment and the following extracts are taken therefrom:

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH REGIMENT,
SECOND BRIGADE, N. G. P.
General Orders No. 3.

1. The annual encampment of the division of the National Guards of Pennsylvania will be held at Mount Gretna, Lebanon county, Pa. July 19th to 26th, 1890, inclusive, and in compliance with orders from superior headquarters the Fifth regiment will leave for camp on Saturday, July 19, 1890, as follows. Companies C, D, F and H will arrange to arrive in Altoona not later than 8.55 p. m. on that date, where, with regimental headquarters car, a specia Fifth regiment train will be made up and proceed east as a section of Philadelphia express at 9.05 p. m. Company B. will arrange to be at Tyrone, companies A and I at Huntingdon and company G at Lewistown Junction, to be picked up bp a special train at these points, and arrive at Camp at an early hour on Sunday morning, July 20, 1890.

One baggage car will leave Indiana to carry baggage of companies D H and C. One baggage car will leave Bellefone to carry baggage of companies B, A I and G. Requisitions has been made for cars as above to be at each company station in time for this connection. One full day's rations will be carried in the haversack. Regimental drum corps will report to adjutant not later than 8 p. m. July 19, 1890, fully equipped. Field, staff and non-commissioned staff will report on train.

11. Quartermaster S. H. Williams Quartermaster Sergeant Thomson and Commissary Sergeant Benner will leave for camp on Thursday, July 17, 1890, there to report to Lieutenant Colonel Mullen, who will have charge of the arrangement of the camp.

Company commanders will detail one corporal and seven privates as a camping party, who will proceed east on day express on Thursday, July 17, 1890, carrying two days' rations. These details must be composed of good, reliable, sober men, and each detail will carry a pick, spade, axe, saw, nails and stable brooms, etc.

Lieutenant Foster, Company B, and Lieutenant Calhoun, Company D, are hereby detailed to take charge of camping party and report the same to Lieutenant Colonel Mullen, at Mount Gretna. Any bad conduct will be promptly reported to Lieutenant Colonel Mullen on arrival. The camping will, under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Mullen, prepare the camp for the regiment on its arrival.

* * * * * * *

V. Officers or enlisted men who by their conduct while en route, or while in camp, shirk duty, or behave improperly, or disobey orders, will be made an example of. It is the intention of the regimental commander, with the assistance of all officers and enlisted men who are anxious for the success of the regiment, to demonstrate to superiors that there is no better disciplined regiment in the Guard than the Fifth.

The Lauth Golden Wedding.

The golden wedding of the venerable Bernard Lauth and wife, of Howard, Centre county, was celebrated Tuesday in the most eleborate manner and was one of the most notable and enjoyable occasions of the sort that ever took place in this State. Not less than 200 persons were present, who were all delightfully entertained in the hospitable mansion and partook of the good things provided with a zest extremely satisfying to the host and hostess. Among the distinguished guests present were Bishop McGovern, of Harrisburg, the head of this diocese, together with Rev's Father Brennan, of Driftwood, Sheridan, of Clearfield, Koch, of Shamokin, Gormley, of Renovo, Power and Seibert, of Lock Haven. High mass was celebrated by Father Brennan and the benediction pronounced by the Bishop. Rev. Father Seibert was master of ceremonies and the singing was rendered by a choir from Lock Haven composed of Misses Julia and Mame Doran and Mrs Stull and Frank D. S. Smith. There were guests present from all over the commonwealth and a number of toasts were offered and replied to. Bishop McGovern replied to one on "Matrimony," while ex-Gov. Curtin responded in his usual felicitous manner to "Is Marriage a Failure?" Certainly looking at the long and happy married life of Mr. and Mrs Lauth, it is unnecessary to ask this question. In the evening dancing was indulged in with other amusements. It was indeed a gala occasion and showed, the high respect in which Mr. and Mrs. Lauth are held by all who know them, far and near. Of course there were many handsome and valuable presents.

J. W. Floyd, the photographer, of Lock Haven, was at Howard that morning and took pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Lauth, for which there will doubtless be a great demand among the many friends of the venerable couple. Fifty years of married life and happy yet. That is the complete answer to the flippant question so often heard now a days, "Is Marriage a Failure?" May the kind old man and his good old wife live to celebrate many more marriage anniversaries.

Obituary.

The following from the Raftsman's Journal is published by request.

Mrs. Lillie A Aldrich, of Sylvan Grove Cooper township, died June 27, 1890 aged 54 years, 2 months and 9 days. Her maiden name was Lillie A Andrews. She was born in Ireland and came to this country with her parents in her childhood, and resided with them in Philadelphia until her marriage, when she removed to Providence, Rhode Island. Some years ago she came to this place to join her only sister and family, and has since lived here, excepting one year spent at West Philadelphia. She was a worthy and faithful member of the M E church for over twenty years, always at her post, fervent in spirit, amiable in disposition, discreet, courteous and kind to all. Her two neices, Mrs. Philip Lucas and Miss Katie Sones, did all in their power to ease and soothe her last painful illness; days and nights were spent patiently anticipating her every wish and want, yet the death angel came all too soon for the pure spirit of the loving Auntie, and the anxious watchers were left alone in the evening twilight, their loss being her gain, for had she not passed from death unto life eternal joining the ranks of loved ones gone before. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. Amen." For their works do not die. A large concourse of friends and acquaintances followed the remains to their last resting place in the cemetery at Kylertown. Her pastor, Rev Wonner, delivered an impressive discourse from the verse, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God,"

To Avoid Sunstroke.

To avoid sunstroke, exercise in excessively hot weather should be very moderate; the clothing should be thin and loose, and an abundance of cold water should be drunk. Workmen and soldiers should understand that as soon as they cease to perspire while working or marching in the hot sun they are in danger of sunstroke, and they should immediately drink water freely and copiously, to afford matter for cutaneous transpiration; keep the skin and clothing wet with water, impending sunstroke may often be warded off by simple measures Besides the cessation of perspiration the pupils are apt to be contracted and there is a frequency of micturition. If there is marked exhaustion, with a weak pulse, resulting from the cold water application, we should administer stimulants. The free use of water, however, both eternally and internally, by those exposed to the direct rays of the sun is the best prophylactic against sunstroke; and laborers and soldiers and others who adopt this measure, washing their hands and faces as well as drinking copiously of water every time they come within reach of it will generally enjoy perfect immunity from sunstroke; Straw hats should be worn, ventilated at the top, and the crown of the hat filled with green leaves or wet sponge. It is better to wear thin flannel shirts in order not to check perspiration. We may expose ourselves a long time in the hot sun and work or sleep in a heated room and enjoy perfect immunity from sunstroke if we keep our skin and clothing wet with water.

For second place—Quigley and Fred Jackson vs. Goldthwaite and Norris. Score—3 and 6. Mitchell and Blanchard vs. Goldthwaite and Norris. Score—6 and 3.

G Jackson and J Hughes won first prize, and Mitchell and Blanchard second prize. The game was largely attended throughout, many ladies being present.

The story is told of a German, who took the hands of his clock to the maker to have them fixed, because they did not keep proper time. Of course, the clock-maker demanded the works, as in them lay the trouble. Boils and blotches, pimples and other eruptions on the exterior tell of a disordered condition of the blood within. If you have these indications, be wise in time, and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities, from whatever cause arising, and tones up the functions generally.

"Golden Medical Discovery" checks the frightful inroads of Scrofula, and, if taken in time, arrests the march of Consumption of the Lungs (which is Lung-scrofula), purifies and enriches the blood, thereby curing all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings, and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative, or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid, "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

—A Williamsport paper states that the Bellefonte base ball club will be there in the near future to play the Williamsport club.

—The population of Philipsburg is given as 3,290 against 1779 in 1880; this is an increase of almost one hundred per cent.

—The name of the "Retort" postoffice has been changed to "Powelton," where all mail matter in the future should be addressed.

—Mayor Wolf, of Philipsburg, will be a candidate for sheriff, it is said and C. L. Fryberger, of same place, a candidate for the Legislature.

—The plasterers are now at work on the new opera house and it won't be many days now until it will begin to assume a finished appearance.

—On last Friday there were twenty-five lawyers in Bellefonte and only one client appeared. The hungry, appealing look of the twenty-five lawyers, as they all tried to engage the attention of the client, so frightened the latter that he hastily departed and has not been seen, or ever heard of, since and it is now to be supposed that in his fright he dropped his case.

—A carrier delivery door has been put in the post office. It has been put there so that persons desiring their mail before the carriers go out or after the last delivery is made can come there and get it from the carrier. It is one more improvement in the post office, and if Mr Fiedler keeps on a little longer he will have it as near perfection as it is possible to have it.

A Proposed scheme.

TO BUILD A TOWN ON HALF MOON HILL AND THEN

BUILD AN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

TO CONNECT WITH THE TOWN PROPER. CONSIDERABLE STOCK ALREADY TAKEN. THE SITE AN ADMIRABLE ONE,

Another suburb of Bellefonte; a town on Half Moon Hill. To be connected with the borough by a nicely graded wide street to run straight up from West High street and in addition an electric railway. The foregoing are some of the rumors that have been circulated here during the past few days. A NEWS reporter investigated the case and found the following facts in substantiation of the circulated rumors:

It appears that a movement has been set on foot by a real estate dealer from Buffalo, N. Y., to organize a stock company for the purpose of purchasing the entire flat—about 100 acres—on the top of Half Moon hill; to lay it out in a town and erect thereon business blocks and suitable as well as comfortable, dwelling houses, the same to be offered for sale at a figure that will command a small margin above cost and a ready sale:

To insure the business growth of this suburb, as well as to make the location more desirable, a wide street is to be graded up from West High street and an electric railway will also be put up. This will make the place easy of access and quite desirable.

Such great confidence has the projecter shown in his work that it is said most all the desired stock has already been subscribed for by prominent and reliable citizens of this place and that the project is already beyond the line of a possibility but has become an assumed fact.

It is to be hoped that the movement will be brought to a full consummation as it would be, not only of great advantage to the present business interests of Bellefonte and vicinity, but would be a stimulus to induce the location of other industries here. As to the location of the proposed town, there could not be a better site chosen in the State for a summer residence. With a generous supply of shade trees it could be made one of the most lovely places in or around Bellefonte. Comparatively level now, with proper care, it could be graded to an almost entirely level location for a good sized town. The projecters have our best wishes for their entire success.

She Died at the Age of 113

Mrs. Eva B. Hart, of Cicero Centre, Onondaga county, New York, who died a day or so ago, turns out to be the oldest living person, as well as the most remarkable person in the United States at the time of her disease. Her age (113), verified by the best authority, shows her to have been born the year after the Declaration of Independence was signed. Her life was strangely checkered, and in her early days she had several narrow escapes from Indian massacres in the Mohawk valley. Until within two years of her death she was a hard working woman, doing her own cooking, baking, washing and ironing. In her old age her hair turned snowy white and began to fall out, but a few years ago her hair was noticed to be coming out again, and instead of being gray or white, was a jet black. It was the boast of the old woman that she was never sick a day in her life, nor took a drop of doctor's medicine. Ever since the children can remember Mrs. Hart has smoked her pipe. The absence of the doctors and the presence of her pipe is what she found to be the elixir of life. At the time of her death she had six living children, twenty-five living grand-children, twenty-one living great-grand children, and one great-great-grandchild, who is Henry Edgar Roe, jr., the thirteen months' son of Henry Roe, of West Adams street, in New York.

Killed in the Derby Mine.

James Peters, aged 17 years, was killed in Derby Mine, near Philipsburg, on Thursday, by a fall of rock. He and his father worked together, but he went into the room where his brother Edward was at work and was talking to him when the mass of rock fell and he was caught above the hips. He never spoke after the accident and died in about three hours. He was the son of Mr. and and Mrs. Joseph Peters, of Pt. Lookout, and was an excellent young man, a faithful member of the Baptist Sunday school. His funeral occurred on Saturday.

—A Linn street lady who, by the way does not believe in that old saw, "'Tis the early bird that catches the worm," makes complaint that by the time she gets to market in the morning all the good things—berries especially—are gone Now this said lady thinks it would be right and proper, and only fair to all parties, that a given time or hour be set for the opening of the market, and that no one be allowed to sell anything until that time comes. As it is, the marketmen come there as early as four o'clock, and keep coming from that time until seven Some persons, who have nothing to hinder, can get up and go to market just about as early as the earliest marketman and such person gets the benefit of the above adage—(especially when cherries are offered late in the season.) In larger towns and cities there is an hour for the opening of market, say half past five or six o'clock, and none dare sell until that time; and at that time those who want to buy generally make it their business to be there. As the Linn street lady says it might be a good thing to establish in Bellefonte. How is it Mr. Chairman of market committee?

Snow Shoe Items.

Miss Mary Gilliland, of Salt Lick, is the guest of her brother Robert, one of Snow Shoe's most popular and most obliging merchants.

Mrs. Dr. Thompson, of Martha, is visiting her numerous friends in this place,

Miss Mary Kelly, one of Snow Shoe's fair daughters, is again on our streets. She is home from Millersville, where she has been attending State Normal, for her summer vacation.

Our genial proprietor of the Washington House, J. G. Uzzle, took the party of A. O. Furst to visit his fish pond and deer park—sources, of interest to all. The party also went to see the fine young bear of Mr. Uzzle's. The party were entertained by our popular and pleasant landlady of the Mountain House, She certainly should feel gratified considering the many compliments she received from the guests.

Miss Maud Howell, who is spending the summer with her aunt, Mrs. Nolan, gave her little friends a delightful lawn party on last Saturday, at the Mountain House. Miss Catherine Atkins, of Washington, helped to receive and and entertain the guests who numbered some thirty-five. They had numerous kinds of very pretty games on the lawn and also on the wide verandas with which the Mountain House is so amply provided. It was, indeed, a pretty sight—these children in their gay costumes tripping lightly over the lawn with almost fairy lightness. At half past four refreshments were served and each guest was presented with a souvenir in the shape of a handsomely illustrated book, daintily decorated with bright colored ribbon. After the rafreshments were served, the children seemed to enter with renewed zest into games until six o'clock when they all assembled in the parlor and were entertained with some music, one of the features of the occasion was the reciting of several pretty little pieces by Justian Marstellar.

On Saturday next a Sunday School picnic from Lamar will spend the day here.

Master Curtie Glenn, of Altoona, who has been in Snow Shoe for the past week, took his departure for State College where expects to visit friends.

James McMullen, a genial young friend, acted as conductor for the special train which brought Hon. A. O. Furst and his party to Snow Shoe on last Wednesday.

Mr. Linn Harris spent Sunday at the Mountain House.

Mr. Jno. I. Potter, of Bellefonte, spent several days at Dr. Stewarts.

Friday and Saturday evenings the the Presbyterians will hold a festival in the church. Object to add to the Sunday school fund. Patronage of the public invited.

Mrs. Weymouth, of Lock Haven, spent part of last week in the city of Snow Shoe.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Chas. Roth is contemplating leaving Snow Shoe in the near future.

The Misses Annie and Margaret Beates returned home from West Chester on last Saturday, at which place they have been attending State Normal.

The worthy P. M, of Clarence was in town on Saturday. FIDELES.

Rev. Ziegler has accepted the agency, for Centre county, for "Light on Life's Pathway," one of the best books of the present day. A PLAY IN THREE ACTS.

A Serio-Comedy That Almost Proved a Realistic Tragedy

As this is our first attempt at writing a play we must beg that neither Al Garman nor Gilbert & Sullivan attempts to encroach on the following as, it may be, (and it may not be) that we will have it copyrighted. If it should prove taking Garman's may use it to open their new opera house with and for the first week's performance we will ask no royalty.

LOCATION OF PLAY AND CAST OF CHARACTER".

The location of this play is in a town about the size of Bellefonte located in Central Pennsylvania. As the play progresses the different scenes will be brought vividly before our readers. The cast of characters is as follows: A Barrister, Law Student, Editor, Ex-Sheriff and little daughter and her dog.

SCENE I.

The location of this scene is in the office of the Barrister, and the backyard of the ex-sheriff. Prominent actors doggie barking—innocent but delightful (?); Barrister and Law Student discusses the plot; suddenly Law Student departs and just as suddenly he returns. In his hand he carries, oh horrors! a gun. Editor puts in an appearance. The three discuss the situation in whispered tones when suddenly the Law Student springs to his feet and cries,

"You villain! die you must."

A sharp report rings out with startling clearness; a little puff of powder smoke and a ki yi, by the little dog, then all was silence. (Curtain falls.)

SCENE II.

This scene also takes place in the office of the barrister We find everything arranged almost precisely as the opening of Scene I, only that the Editor is also present.

Suddenly the door flies open and the tall form of the Ex-Sheriff looms up in the door way. With hatchet in hand he advances toward the little group and, in language that makes the three assembled there quake with fear, demands to know "why you shot my little girl's dog? Your time has now come; your race is run," when suddenly as if by superhuman power the Barrister breaks the magic spell of the Ex-Sheriff's wrath and says, "He's got a hatchet."

The terrible awfulness of their position then dawned on the confused mind of the Editor and, with an awful gasp, he uttered the one word "Lost" and then "wilted."

It now seemed as if the Ex-Sheriff would have it all his own way and that no human power could save the doomed trio, when suddenly another form darkens the doorway and the Ex-Sheriff's twelve-year-old son springs to his side and grasps the arm on which was the hand that held the hatchet (which arm, by the way, was the only arm the Ex-Sheriff had.) The weapon was wrenched from his grasp and the infuriated man forced outside the office. But he could not be taken away until he had poured all the vials—as well as quart bottles—of his ungovernable wrath upon the unprotected heads of the scared-half-to-death-and-still-a-shaking inmates.

But he was finally conducted away and an investigation was made on which it was found that nobody was hurt except the dog and he had been shot through the neck, which wound would not necessarily prove fatal. Under the cover of a guilty conscience the Barrister, Law Student and Editor separated and in the darkness fled for their separate homes. (Curtain falls. By all rules we should have dropped the curtain when the Ex Sheriff was flourishing his hatchet and swearing vengeance, but our curtain boy had gone out for a drink and the stage manager was too excited to think of it.)

SCENE III.

WHY THEY WERE AFRAID.

Austrian Reasons for not Anfwering Census Questions.

A fear that they might be compelled to do military service or pay taxes is what induces some of the foreigners, located near Bellefonte, to positively refuse to answer census questions. On Saturday two of this class of undesirable emigrants were before United States Commissioner Bentley, having been arrested by Marshal Barring, at the instance of Supervisor of the Census Bricker, of this district. They gave their names as Joseph Raphel and Marcus Laconicz. After a night in jail they were taken before the Commissioner at nine o'clock Saturday morning for a hearing.

J. H. Oliger, a census enumerator, of Bellefonte, testified that the men, who reside in Spring township, Centre county, are Austrians, and that they refuse to give any information concerning themselves. The enumerator took an interpreter with him, but even then no information could be obtained from them. A foreigner named Stojkovic, who acted as interpreter, was present at the hearing and related the result of his interviews with the men.

Meyer Cohn, of this city, was sworn by the Commissioner, and through him the prisoners were induced to talk, after the law had been explained to them. He succeeded in getting from them the fact that they were afraid of military service as the first reason, and a fear that they would be compelled to pay taxes as a second.

After a mutual understanding they were permitted to depart, after promising to give all necessary information concerning themselves.

Played in Lock Haven.

The Bellefonte base ball club went to Lock Haven on Tuesday to play the Lock Haven club. They departed full of spirits and buoyant with hope of at glorious victory. They played and, a the close of the games the score stood 21 to 3 in favor of Lock Haven. The Bellefente boys came home. Only about three of them had the ocurage to come home on the 5.20 p. m. train, the others —some of them at least—stopped off at Milesburg and came into town on the night train; some of them walked up and came into town the back way and some of them are yet in hiding in the woods holding sweet communion with nature and the birds. It is really too bad, boys; but you ought to know better who to tackle.

Death of Mrs. Daniel Snyder.

Mrs. Daniel Snyder, of Mackeyville, died yesterday, the consequence of her long fast, which begun on Sunday, June 10. She had become very weak and very much emaciated and her death was in daily expectancy for a couple of weeks past. She had lost the power to speak aloud. Since the date above mentioned no food is known to have passed her lips, her only sustenance being a little water Why she entered upon this long fast is a mystery. She had fasted previous to this, but never so long. She must have wanted to rid herself of this world.

—Howard McClellan, the young man who died after drinking a glass of ice water, near Tusseyville, the other day, was 23 years of age instead of 18. The young man had intended starting to college that morning but, at the solicitation of his father who had been asked to dig a grave, he remained and assisted in hauling in grain. His father was in the graveyard when the news of his son's death was brought him and the shock was so great that the old gentleman was completely prostrated and it was at first thought he would have to be carried home.
